should be renovated with Ayer's Sarsaparilla and the System fortified for the change of Seasons.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Yan Brush's picture was hung on the line.

"Was it a marine view?"

"Yes."

"They probably hung it on the line to dry."

"Mr. Jaysmith," remarked that gentleman's mother-in-law at she entered the office and drew up a chair...

"Yes," replied Jaysmith, cheerfully. "She didn't know I was loaded."

Mr. Bluepill—I am in favor of any movement that will shorten 5 or 6 hours of labor. I think no man should be compelled to work more than eighteen hours a day.

First Poor Young Man—I noticed you passed Young Goldust without returning his bow.

Second Poor Young Man—Yes, I always cut him.

First Poor Young Man—Great swell, isn't he?

Second Poor Young Man—Yes, and it's the cheapest way I know of cutting a swell.

Miss Sadie Fulltriger (roughly)—Colonel, I'm afraid you have a awful lazy horse. He stops at every large tree he comes to.

Col. Whipshaw (of Battlesnake Ranch)—He ain't lazy, Miss Fulltriger. I rode that horse to five different lynchins' less last week. No wonder he stops when he comes to a tree!

Elsie (in astonishment)—There's the moon in the daytime! Isn't that a joke on God?

Mamma—Why, Elsie, what do you mean?

Elsie—Why, He forgot to take it in last night.

Lanlord (to tenant who is very delinquent in paying his rent)—I am very sure you played foot-ball while at College, sir?

Mr. Overton—What makes you think that, sir?

Lanlord—Simply because you are always a quarter-back.

Uncle James walking with niece Mary, aged four, points to the moon on whose disk the dark parts show quite plainly, and says: "There is a man in the moon burning brush." The girl, of enquiring mind, asks: "What are the sticks and sniffs, saying: 'Yes, I'll tell the 'moke.'"

Gentleman in Museum (looking at talking machine)—"Quite an invention!" Keeper—"Yes, it speaks for itself."

PROTECHNIS effects in table decorations are rampant. Electric wires are strung through the stems of tulips, white lilies and jonquils; a bunch of them is pointed in an epergne, giving the red, yellow, green and brown fruit the glow of enclaved light...

MABEL'S GRANDMA. "The world is even as we take it. And life, dear child, is what we make it."

This is some, even if it is not Shaloo's. Indeed, it is the opening stanza of an anonymous poem. It was the sentiment of 25 old men, her grandchild, and a young man, who were present at the birth of Mabel...
