Rev. Philip Graff writing from Monterey, California, says: Through my European trip was an epoch making event to me, this tour seems to me still more important and fruitful. With health radiant, it is no wonder the eager eyes found food for end. Less knowledge and profitable enjoyment returned with a vastly better appreciation of the greatness of my country, both in size and marvelous progress and its problems. All along the journey the miracles of nature and men seemed to grow on me continually. Next week I expect to turn my pilgrim feet Mifflin word, per Northern Pacific. Please arrange Sacramento service for September 21. Love to all. Very Truly—Philip Graff.

Last Wednesday a man named J. Wolfe, a pedler of dressgoods, table linen, suspenders, stockings, and so forth, appeared before Justice Beitzel, in Patterson, and made information against Simon Fogleman, who lives on the Parker farm, in Fermanagh, charging Fogleman, with the larceny of 2 dress patterns, suspenders, and other things from his Wolfe's wagon while it stood in the Parker barn on the Monday night previous. Wolfe stayed with Fogleman over Monday night and had his wagon in the barn. On Tuesday he drove to Bealeton, and stayed there on Tuesday night. On Wednesday morning he discovered that he had lost some goods. He came to Patterson on Wednesday and made the above information against Fogleman. The justice placed a warrant in the hands of Constable Powell and Wolfe went out to Fogleman's to arrest Simon, but Simon did not know Powell and would not heed the warrant, a scuffle ensued, which resulted in the officer getting his neck scratched. Powell came to town and took officer Samuel Lapp to Fogleman's place. Simon knew Lapp, and offered no resistance but came to town, denied the pedler's charge and was bailed to answer the charge before court.

A Belleville correspondent of the Lewistown Sentinel says: Several of our farmers intend feeding sheep during the coming winter, as there seems to be more money in them than cattle. * * * The sweet potato crop will be good in these parts this year. Also the sorghum crop. There is not as much sorghum raised by our farmers as there should be. Our cows lambs and sheep that while out hunting at night the week their dogs chased two large wildcats on Jacks mountain, but they did not succeed in capturing them. * * * Hog cholera still continues around here, and at present there are quite a number of hogs sick and some dying. Quite a number of remedies have been tried, but have done very little good so far. * * * Foxes have taken up their quarters in some of the corn fields, and have been catching a number of turkeys the past week that are around in the fields. Some of our hunters with their beagle hounds could have fine sport after them by putting several persons around a fox hole and start the beagle hounds in and route them out. * * * Some of our citizens have put muzzles on their dogs when they let them out so that they cannot pick up poisoned meat that may be lying around, as several have been poisoned and died here.

From the Lewistown Sentinel of September 5: On Monday evening, Wm. C. Russell, a well known young man of this place, took a walk out the Sunbury and Lewistown railroad, and when on the high trestle east of town he was met by the work train. He got out to the end of the cap piece to a trestle, and although shouted to get down on the timbers he remained where he was. Engineer Davis did his best to stop the train but did not succeed, and as it was slowly passing the young man, a step on the engine struck him and he was knocked off. He alighted among the stones below, his head being crushed, his arm broken and other injuries sustained. Death was instantaneous. His remains were brought to town, but no inquest was held, there being several witnesses to the affair and there being no doubt it was purely accidental.

Deceased was about 36 years of age, a son of the late William Russell and a brother of George L. and Samuel Russell, who constitute the present banking firm. He was widely known in the community, and his death under these unfortunate circumstances caused a general feeling of sorrow. He took a great interest in railroad affairs, and his familiarity with trains and engines was such that he was assumed to be the case, that he did not take complete precaution for his own safety.

Says the Bloomfield Advocate, of September 3: On last Thursday Mr. Henry Weaver, of near Blain, put an end to twenty-two snakes. He killed two old ones measuring some three feet in length, and soon after turned up a nest of twenty eggs each of which contained a snake measuring from six to nine inches in length. A severe hail and rain storm paged over and around this place last Friday, Bloomfield catching the edge of the storm. The corn fields Northeast of town were fairly riddled while at Mr. Oliver Rice's, on the Newport road, the stalks were completely riddled. At Abram May's the storm assumed the character of a hurricane and nearly blew the buildings down. It was the severest known in that section for years. Present individuals hereabouts shoveled up the hail and made ice cream. * * * On Monday of last week Mrs. Jacob L. Minch, of Green Park, with her four children drove in a top spring wagon to an orchard belonging to her husband, one mile east of Lays ville, to gather apples. In leaving the field while Mrs. Minch was leading the horse a low limb of a tree scraped the top of the wagon, frightening the animal, which ran off. A tool house of considerable size was struck and overturned, and the wagon was turned completely upside down. A child in the vehicle was hurled out, but escaped uninjured. Mrs. Minch, who pluckily held on to the horse, was thrown and was severely bruised and badly strained. The harness was torn from the animal, and a single tree broken off the wagon—no other harm was done.

Mrs. Alice Jeffries, prosecutrix. Prosecutrix charged that defendant attempted to have improper intercourse with her, forcibly on the 8th day of May last, while she was milking a cow, the families of Jeffries and Varnes occupying the same house. Varnes story was corroborated by a young boy, Haines, whose testimony showed that the woman's story could not be true, as Varnes was within his sight, and not in the stable, at the time the assault was sworn to have been committed, and the woman's reputation for truth was badly assailed. Samuel Berryman, prosecutor. The barn of Mrs. C. F. Glick, in Beale township, was burned and Glick not being a resident at the farm, but being in the neighborhood, and in company with Clark within three months of a mile of this barn, the suspicion arose that Glick had hired Clark to burn the barn for the insurance, and information having been made by Clark's wife against Berryman for an aggravated assault and battery, Berryman also, as it appeared, actuated by hope of a reward from the insurance company, took it upon himself to bring this prosecution. Verdict, not guilty. In Commonwealth vs. C. F. Glick, jointly indicted with Clark, a nolle prosequi was entered after the verdict in Clark's case was received. Commonwealth vs. Samuel Berryman.
