Forty-five years ago, after completing the learning of cabinet making with James Robinson in this town, Thomas Stass went west. His place of residence is now in Montana, where he has prospered. Last week he came to visit the country of his nativity. There are only two or three people now living in Mifflintown when he was here. He drove out to Fayette township, where he was born to look for the grave of his father at Mechanicsville, but found that the Lutheran church in that place is built over it, which is a more costly and grander monument than he would have erected over it. He was informed in Fayette that the grave of his father had a slab over it and was not disturbed by the building. In a talk with Daniel Pannabaker, he stated that in all the forty-five years he was away he only met two Mifflintown people, one of whom was E. D. Parker and the other man's name he could not remember.

SKINNER - PATTON MEETING.
Captain Skinner, Democratic candidate for Congress in swinging around the 18th district stopped off here last Friday. He held a reception at the National hotel, and was followed by a large number of the town. He was accompanied by the Hon. G. W. Patton and other distinguished guests.

The Captain who is a large man, fat and fat, and looks as if he had been living on turkey soup, and Fulton county hard cider stepped to the door and made a speech. He said he had been in Juniata on two former occasions. The first time after he came out of the army as a student at Acadia. The second time on a visit to Dr. Atkinson. He said he had not sought the nomination, and he went into an explanation of how he tried to avoid the nomination, but he got the statement so tangled that he let the cat out of the bag, that he and Dr. Crawford had been considering the question of his nomination quite awhile before the Congressional conference met.

He said he had won despite the scandal of fourteen years ago the testimony of Representative Petroff on the Snagshaw-Patterson bill, before a Legislative Inquiry investigating committee, of March 1876. He did not get into the details of Petroff's testimony as to himself. That is what Petroff testified about himself and the Captain, when they both were members of the Legislature at Harrisburg.

On Friday March 31-1876 between the hours of 8 and 9 in the morning I met Skinner, the Journal Clerk of the House. We walked together towards the Keystone House. Skinner first opened the subject to me by saying that the boom bill would likely be reached on Tuesday, and that he would like to see the Philadelphia delegation fixed, that the lumbermen would give him $100,000 if they could. I told him I thought they could be dealt with. By that time we reached the Keystone, and he said he would see me again, and left me. That morning while in the House, Skinner came to me and asked me whether I could get ten men out of the Philadelphia delegation from both sides each. I said certainly. He said that Embick had told me that he would be necessary to get ten men out of the Philadelphia delegation to carry the bill, and he would let me know further about it on Monday night. That afternoon, as I was going to the depot, in company with O'Neill and Patterson, I stopped at the Lochiel Hotel and while there met Skinner. He called me aside and said that Embick had gone to the lumbermen to make arrangements with the lumber men and would let me know what they would do on Monday night. So Skinner left me. After he had gone it occurred to me that I had paired off with Mr. Nisley on his bill and I had important business in Philadelphia that would likely detain me over Tuesday, so I wrote a note and left it with the clerk of the hotel for Skinner, in which I stated that in case he heard from the lumbermen before Monday to telegraph the same to me, so I would see the Philadelphia members while in the city. I did not hear from him.

On Monday I came up, as the business I expected did not occur, and while in the House Skinner came to me and said that the lumbermen had agreed to give five thousand dollars for ten men out of the Philadelphia delegation, and that they were willing to put the matter into my hands or in an old hand whom we might suggest satisfactory to them. I said, "I am satisfied. I will see the rest of them and let you know to-morrow."

On Tuesday morning I told Skinner they were satisfied for him to hold the money. He said, "Give me the ten names, with four others you can get in case they are needed. I said: "How about the money?" He said: "If you meet me in the clerk's room at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon we will settle that." I said: "All right." So I met Skinner at the time named. We went into the office together and had not been there three minutes before Mr. Embick appeared. He seemed to have a key of the door, as it was locked and he came in without it being opened for him, and he said that he wanted the ten names. Skinner said to me he wanted the ten names to see if there was any among them that he had already got. I gave Skinner ten names, which he wrote on a piece of paper and then handed them to Embick.

He took them and examined them. Then he took a certificate of deposit out of his pocket, endorsed it upon the back with his name and payable to the order of Skinner and handed it to Skinner, who started to say something to him, when Embick interrupted him by saying that he did not want anything further to say, that he would settle it between us, and then he walked out of the room.

Skinner handed the certificate to me, saying: "Look at it yourself." I took it, saw Dougherty Bros. signature on the face of it and Embick's on the back, payable to the order of Skinner, and it was for seven thousand five hundred dollars.

That was the first intimation that they wanted fourteen men, that they would like to have get four men, that will make five hundred each and five hundred for each of the four men that is all right. To satisfy you that this is all right, I want you to get two or three of them to go with us to Dougherty Bros. and I will satisfy you that it is all right. I will meet you on the corner of Third and Market streets. I said: "All right." I started out to get somebody, as so one knew what I had done in the matter but Harry O'Neill.

I went towards the Keystone. When I reached Third street I saw

O'Neill, and told him what had happened between Skinner, Embick and I, and asked him to come along with me for some one else to take part in this matter, in order to give it a bona fide appearance. He then consented to go as far as Third and Market streets.

On our way down Third street we met Skinner. He said to us: "You walk down and I will follow. When we reached Market street O'Neill left me and I walked over towards the Lochiel. I stepped around the corner, when Skinner came up he asked me what was the matter with O'Neill.

I said that he would not go, that he and I would do as well. We went into the bankers' together, Skinner called a man by name. We passed into a back room, Skinner submitted this certificate to him. "Is this your signature?" He answered: "Yes, we will pay that to-day or to-morrow, whenever present-d." With that he walked out. Skinner left me at the door.

I met O'Neill on the corner and told him what the banker had said. That afternoon, when the House was in session, Skinner called me into the Transcribing Clerk's room and said he wanted these four names. I told him I would see the men and give them to him. I left him and went into the post office, wrote out the names and gave them to him, saying it would be well to have the bill brought up this afternoon, because this matter might leak out.

He said they had not determined what they would do. They thought of making it the special order for the morning or postponing it until the next Tuesday. However, he would find out and let me know. In about a half hour I went to him and asked what they intended doing, and he told me they would take up the bill that afternoon when reached, and if necessary would extend the session an hour in order to get through.

He said "keep all of them here." I told him they were all right. When the bill was reached and a vote taken, all of the names I had given him voted against it. Skinner also told me while in the clerk's room, that "they were bound to carry the bill through, to show you that they mean business, they gave me—Skinner—an envelope with $300 in it, without saying a word." This is about the substance of what transpired between Skinner and myself.

He denounced Petroff's testimony as false, and protested against being condemned on the testimony of a man, who was expelled from the House, and afterwards sent back from Philadelphia to the Legislature and then engaged in bribery, and for that was sent to the penitentiary.

It is hard for Democratic politicians to get along without New York and of course the Captain was no exception, and he wormed it into his speech by telling how a New York World correspondent had called on him and wanted to tell him how Atkinson was interested in Washington boodle, but he said he would not do so.

A kick had been in Franklin county, and at a meeting at Waynesburgh had made a tariff speech, there is no use talking about the tariff, the McKinley bill will stand on the books, even if the Lower-house should have a majority of Democrats in it for the reason, that the Senate is Republican and would not agree to the repeal of the McKinley bill.

He said I am the candidate of the Democratic party. He expressed willingness to serve the party in the capitol of the nation.

pass over their control of government to the men elected, who assume control of affairs. He disapproved of special organizations that advance special interests, and denounced boomer.

The only thing that he particularized on was relative to taxation. He said the aggregate tax in the state is $28,000,000, and that real estate pays about $20,000,000, and other interests about $8,000,000. (While talking on that point, he said that an equalization tax had been passed by the late Legislature, but the bill had not been signed in the Senate and therefore failed. His points on the taxation of the State were like those used by Wellington Smith at the Patton ratification meeting at Mifflintown.)

When he was talking about taxation he missed the opportunity to state that Delaware has been selling it all over the state, that when he is elected Governor, he will urge it upon the Legislature to set a portion of the corporation tax to the relief of county and township taxes, that would have been practical talk on a practical subject, but the probability is that Mr. Patton was rehearsing an old speech that he had committed before Delaquer came to the front with a promise to meet the demands of the times when elected Governor. Patton was so general in his remarks that he made no promise on the important issues of the day.

He talked about clean politics and correct methods on the part of government officials.

Mr. Patton closed his speech by declaring that he will be content with the result of the election in November.

Mr. Barclay, was the next speaker. He talked about the worst dog and soldier burial bill, and about the Meaville soldier, Norris, and how Patton had spoiled the soldier orphan schools, but he said not a word about lotteries.

Skinner turned up at the last moment and declared and told it at the last moment and declared and told it at the last moment and declared and told it at the last moment.
