Pumpers, you see, says the New York World are small round-shaped affairs like a dough's saucer. They are made of rubber and when held in place in the mouth, they cause for woman's cheeks to become plump and round. When ladies have lost some of their teeth pumpers come into play—prevents their jaws from appearing lank and angular.

A man named Charles Gordon had February the 5th set apart to marry Miss Mary Kephart, of near Huntingdon. The day before the wedding day, Gordon obtained $50 from the impending bride, and $150.00 from her mother to go to Huntingdon to make some purchases. He put the money in his pocket on the last seen of him, he was next seen at York, westward bound. Miss Kephart has the congratulations of Huntingdon people that she made an escape from a marriage with the thief Gordon. He should be captured and sent to prison for obtaining the $200.00 under false pretense.

In another column read an article from the New York Press: "Farmers and the Tariff." The article, briefly gives the experience of Connecticut farmers and their views on the new tariff. The experience of the Connecticut farmer is identical with the few farmers of Juniata, who cultivate tobacco, and the same identical views that they express in the New York paper have been expressed in the SENTINEL and REPUBLICAN. Not many weeks ago W. H. Groninger in a communication from Port Royal, reviewed all that was said by the Press, last Wednesday. The only difference is that Mr. Groninger's article as it appeared in the SENTINEL and REPUBLICAN, discussed the subject more thoroughly and at greater length.

The grocery and confectionary store of John Etkin, and Cloyd Gilson, was each entered by thieves last Saturday night. The stores adjacent, and it was through the back door in the respective rooms that an entrance was made. The burglars bored a hole large enough to admit of the insertion of an arm under the latch in Etkin's door and then reached in and unlocked the door with the key which was in the lock. The same method of work was employed on Gilson's door. There was a bar across his door but that was no obstacle; it was near enough to be reached through the hole, and they lifted it off. In both places the money drawers were searched. In Mr. Gilson's store some change was secured. Dried beef, and tobacco were stolen from Etkin.

Lewisstown Sentinel: Mr. Thompson Pollock had a narrow escape a short time since, from what might have been a disastrous fire. Going to the barn one morning before day-break, he took his lantern with him, and while in the feeding room, attending to his work, the lantern was in some way upset, the top coming off, the oil ran out among the straw and immediately took fire. Mr. Pollock retained his presence of mind, caught hold of a blanket that was hanging near, quickly threw it over the fire and smothered it out. Without the blanket just at that moment there would have been no saving the barn. * * * A deer was down in the fields on Saturday, so hunters need not sell their guns, as there is at least one left. We learn that the 2 panthers are showing pretty hard on the deer as it is shown by the tracks in the snow. They were held enough to come within a few rods of Mr. Treasurer's buildings and we think it would be a good idea for some of our brave hunters to kill them and save the deer for next hunting season.

From the New Port Ledger of February 6—Last Friday night, a bout nine o'clock, the dread cry of fire again stirred the people of this town to activity. Upon hurrying to the locality, it was found to be the old building formerly used as a toll house for the New Port river bridge, before that structure was made free. The building was owned by Geo. Fleisher, and occupied by Emanuel Wright and his wife and little boy. The fire originated in a back room on the first story, where there had been no fire, and it spread so rapidly that Mrs. Wright failed to get down stairs before the passage was cut off. She was taken out the second story window and down over the porch roof. Only a small portion of the furniture was saved. He had no insurance. The building was not insured. How the fire originated Mr. Wright does not know, and it must have been purely an accident. * * * David H. Hart, of New Port was run over by a locomotive in the Harrisburg yard and killed. His head was severed from his body. * * * Eddie Walters of New Port was killed by the cars, he was jumping freights and fell under the wheels. This took place on Saturday, on Juniata he died.
