Unsatisfied.

In the morning of life, our good ship manned,
With ne'er thought where the port may be,
We loose our boat from the flowery strand
And sail away on a summer sea,
The waveless plains a silvery sheen,
Round geranium islands with a shining bench,
But beyond those beautiful meadows green
Are fairer ones that we never reach.

The valley is bright with blooming flowers,
And sweet with the wild-wood secrets;
but fain
Would we climb the mountain that grandly towers;
And long for heights that we can not gain,
Ah, how we yearn for the enchanted peaks
Whose crests are lost in the golden hazell
And ever a pathway our footstep seeks,
'Till our eyes grow dim in steadfast gaze.

Why is it we never are satisfied?
Whence comes this spirit of sad unrest,
This haunting ghost o'er by our side,
This restless longing within the breast?
Does the soul still pine for its native clime
And the spirit-haunts that it knew of yore,
Some land where it always is summer time—
Some beautiful dim-remembered shore?

But it finds no rest for the weary feet,
Nowhere beneath the wilting stars;
And forever the wild winds beat and beat,
Like a captive bird 'gainst prison bars;
Waiting, waiting, we know not why,
For something—Alas! it is ever thus;
And never be with the wind-swept sky,
Do the things we will for come to us.

HAVING HER OWN WAY

"But I don't want to be rich!" said Violet Howard. "I'm quite as rich as I need to be already. What do I gain by another fifty thousand dollars?"

Old Herodotus Howard stared at his saucy grand-daughter as if she had propounded a piece of rank heresy—as indeed it was in his system of every day theology.

"Violet, you are a fool," said he, harshly. "And it's lucky for you you have a grandfather who can look after your interest better than you seem able to do yourself. Mr. Ericson is to be here to-morrow afternoon. And you will please"—with an ironical emphasis on the word—"receive him as your future husband!"

Violet opened wide her saucy brown eyes.

"And what is to become of Oliver Belton?" she asked, demurely.

"Oliver Belton is nothing to me!" stormed her grandfather. "Neither you nor Oliver Belton thought it proper to consult me before you found up a boy and girl love affair with a boy and girl engagement; and I might long ago have lost you by a proposal! As it is, you must take the consequences of your own folly."

Violet's eyes followed her grandfather, with a mischievous sparkle in their laugh of fun.

"Now I am in a way!" she thought to herself, "if grandpapa really thinks I am going to throw myself for life to that old coxcomb, Mr. Ericson! To carry his carpet-bag, listen to his lectures on 'health cure' and 'rest cure'—nobody can guess what they are—and truly Violet Howard, I'm not to be very cautious!" (Grandpapa was thin a great deal given to the farm-house style, and pronounced it like hand, and pronounced it like hand.)

So left to herself, Violet pictured she to herself a cool afternoon in the apple blossom morning, their tiny pink shells all strewn top on the grass, and the downy, yellow chickens peeping around her in a mingled of mud or a bit of crumbled bread. Sue was plump and rosy and pretty like the apple blossoms, I suppose fair to look upon. Whatever Oliver Belton might have been in his unfortunately, a gentleman and a lover.

Presently Violet rose up again and went into the house, only stopping to gather a cluster of cinnamon roses to pin into her golden-brown hair as she went.

"Dorcas!" said she, putting her face into the kitchen, where the said maid-servant was snapping suet for an uncteous pudding.

Dorcas looked up, even her hard countenance softening at the radiant apparition of youth and beauty in her homely kitchen world.

"Well, Miss Violet!"

"We shall commence to clean house to-morrow."

"To clean house! Miss Violet, and company coming."

Violet's brows contracted.

"Company ought to make no difference of a regular institution like this, Dorcas."

"But it was full fortnight earlier than ever was remembered afore," remonstrated Dorcas.

"I can't help that," said Violet briskly, "can't have the spring cleaning dragging half through the year.

"There's something in that," said Dorcas reflectively. "But what will master say?"

"He needn't know it, Dorcas, until we've got the carpets all up and the floors all deluged with soapsuds. And then you see, Dorcas," and the brown eyes shone mischievously, "he can't help himself."

Dorcas smiled grimly. Dorcas White never had a lover or a love affair in all the six-and fifty years of her solitary life, but Dorcas had a woman's instinct lying dormant within her heart, and she evidently comprehended the whole affair.

"Very well, Miss Violet," she said.

And Violet went singing off to skim the cream for tea.

Mr. Ericson came in the next evening's stage, complacently looking forward to a country rest and country delights, after his long dusty journey. He took a portly, well-preserved old gentleman, with a bald head, a dyed mustache and a set of expensive false teeth, never considered that, as money had bought pretty much everything else in the world for him, it might well be supposed that by purchasing a pretty young wife in the person of Violet Howard!

Mr. Howard rode on to the nearest village that he might make legal business and duly conduct his expected visitor across the gate.

"Violet, my dear, I'm sure," said Mr. Howard, wiping off his sleeve-pipe [illegible] from his brow with a spotless [illegible] handkerchief. "Lovely weather we're having. Yes, yes, we will walk in, Dorcas, where's Miss Violet?"

Dorcas made her appearance with a visage as rueful as that of the Gorgons of old, and her head tied up in a towel, sat down her pail and scrubbing brush.

"She's [illegible], sir, polishin' the back [illegible]."

"Dorcas, the back windows! my grandfather [illegible]."

"Yes, sir, she is cleaning house, sir," chuckled Dorcas.

"The [illegible]!"

Mr. Howard's under jaw dropped. He turned pale with grief.

"They're [illegible] for woman's treaties," said he, [illegible].

"How [illegible] told Violet you were coming."

"Dorcas, you let me interfere with my [illegible] arrangements. Mr. Ericson, whose idea of housekeeping consisted of leaving a dirty house in the morning, and coming back to new curtains, fresh chair covers and polished furniture at night. You see our old bachelor had yet much to learn.

Violet came to the tea-table, her pretty face disfigured by a close cap, a bib apron enveloping her figure in its voluminous and curious folds and a pre-occupied air. There was nothing to eat but bread and butter, damaged pickles and cold pork.

"Eh! How's this?" asked Mr. Howard, surveying the board with a disgusted air. "Is this the best you have to set before us, Violet?"

"Grandpapa!" said Violet, with an injured air, "you know I have some ambition to be a good housekeeper—and how can I clean house properly and yet spend my whole time in the kitchen? Besides, I for one don't believe in indigestible dainties. If ever I keep house I shall live on plain Graham bread and simple cold water!"

Mr. Ericson, who was rather fond of harmless little side-dishes and salads, jellies and creams, winced visibly. Grandpapa Howard stared at the saucy little girl in blank wonder.

After tea Mr. Ericson sat down to a chat with Violet; but he had scarcely spoken a sentence before she rose.

"Excuse me!" said she; "but I must go and see that the carpets are brought in from the grass and the white-wash pails covered. Your room was white-washed to-day, Mr. Ericson, and thoroughly scrubbed. I saw to it, myself!"

"Eh?" gasped the elderly lover thinking of his rheumatism and sciatica, "Poss bly it may be a little damp—if—if any other apartment was equally as convenient—"

The bedsteads are all down, and the carpets all up!" interrupted Violet. "You can either sleep there or in the barn, whichever you choose!"

Mr. Ericson looked rather discomfited. Evidently the velvet kitten could scratch, if she chose! And wasn't it just possible that Violet Howard might be a shrew? He was no Petrochio to attempt taming this Katherine—and—

Just then Mr. Howard came in, and the old gentleman's reverie was cut short.

He went yawning to his bedroom, at nine o'clock. It was rather stupid to sit by the light of a kerosene lamp and listen to old Howard's platitudes. Violet came near him no more.

"The—e—w!" said Mr. Ericson, looking hopelessly at the wet floors, [illegible] rocking walls of his room. "Sheets damp, I'll bet a cookey! My good woman," to Dorcas, who was carrying his lamp; "how often does your young lady clean house?"

"Four times a year, sir," said Dorcas promptly," and oftener if she thinks the house needs it. She's a dreadful smart housekeeper, is Miss Violet.

"Four times a year!" echoed Mr. Ericson, in dismay. "Why a man's life would be scoured and scrubbed and steamed away from him at this rate."

He woke up at the first dawn of the morning, stiff, sore, with aching pains in every joint.

Confound house-cleaning," he thought, as he contrived to draw his bombicloth coat across the newly-whitened wall, thereby causing it to assume a resemblance to a miller's blouse. "I've had enough of it."

He came down to a breakfast of weak coffee, pickles and cold pork again, with a bag ready packed.

"You're not going to leave us, Ericson?" cried his host.

"—I find important business will take me away this morning," unblushingly fled our venerable hero. "And look you here Howard—a word in your ear—I find, on mature reflection, that it would be very foolish for an old codger like myself to think of allying myself, to your—ahem—charming grand-daughter. May and November, eh? and all that sort of thing! She'll be a great deal happier with some one nearer her own age. And," speaking very fast to anticipate the opposition he saw in Mr. Herodotus Howard's face, "about that trifle of money between us, we'll cry quits. What does a few dollars signify between friends?" Take it as a wedding present to Miss Violet, whenever she finds some one to take my place. Ha! ha! ha!"

And away went Mr. Ericson.

Violet Howard did not waste a single tear over her recreant lover. She went merrily on with the spring cleaning. And when the annual ceremonial was over she married—Oliver Belton! It was very singular how Violet Howard always contrived to have her own way.

WANTED MAMMA TO KNOW IT.—Little Willie had had the subject of a new brother or sister mentioned to him as a probability in the near future. One morning the nurse called him and said:

"Willie, here is a little sister the angels brought you last night."

"O, let me see!" cried Willie in a great glee. "The angels never had any parasols, did they?"

"Why, what a question. Why do you say so?"

"Cause, they let her get sun burnt. She's right red. Take keer, let me by, quick,"

"Where are you going?"

"Going to tell mamma. She don't know it."

HE WAS NOT INTRODUCED.—"Some girls are too confounded smart to live," said a young lawyer, whose office is on F street, to his companion.

"Why? What's the matter now?" inquired the friend.

"Well, I was at a dance one night, and I heard a certain Congressman's daughter talking to another girl, and the other girl asked her to introduce me, because she didn't know me, but had seen me so often she wanted to."

"And didn't she introduce you?"

"Naw, he said, in a disgusted tone, "she looked at her, kind of funny, you know, and said: 'Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise' Now what do you think of that?"

MRS. GOLDLEAF, newly graduated from a very humble sphere of life, is fond of using a French word now and then, and this she always does with striking effect. As, for instance, when speaking of some duty her maid-servant had left undone, she remarked in a light and airy manner. "Pauline is a good servant—a very good servant—but I must confess she is apt to be negligee."

OBEYING INSTRUCTIONS.—Old Lady (to grocer's boy)—Don't you know, boy, that it is very rude to whistle when dealing with a lady?

Boy—That's what the boss told me to do, mum,

Old Lady—Told you to whistle?

Boy—Yes, 'm. He said if we ever sold you anything we'd have to whistle for the money.

INTO a solution of gum arabic stir plaster of Paris until the mixture assumes the consistency of cream; apply with a brush to the broken edges of c[illegible]na and join together. In three days the article cannot be broken in the same place.

TO GIVE to soup a peculiarly clear appearance, let it get cold, then to half a gallon of soup put in the white of one egg, and the shell also; let the soup simmer on the back of the stove for ten minutes or even longer, then strain it.

CALIFORNIA STILL AHEAD.—Pennsylvania Man—We have discovered gold quartz in Franklin county.

California Man—Quartz! O, pshaw! We never pretend to find it in California in less than bushels.

Open canned fruit an hour or two before needed for use. It is far richer when the the oxygen is thus restored to it.

HOUSEHOLD.

BASKETS OF PAPER.—Almost any shaped baskets and work cases can be made of plaited paper. White, brown or newspaper may be utilized for this purpose. To make a white basket, cut into narrow strips, three quarters of an inch wide, thin cartridge paper; double each strip lengthwise into two and plait it. When you have plaited a sufficient quantity, stitch the pieces together into the shape you wish the basket to be, using a small basin, jar or even another basket to assist in shaping the work. When the basket is stitched into shape, and the handles put on, give it two coats of hot gelatine and water, and when thoroughly dry, varnish. Baskets of newspaper or brown paper must be painted with oil color and afterward varnished.

WE KNEW of a lady once who was famed for her social gatherings. Everybody came away delighted from her entertainments. When some one asked her the secret she simply replied, "Plenty of light." Try it, friends, in your own homes. If you wish your company to enjoy themselves give them light in abundance.

THERMOMETER FRAMES.—Cut an oblong piece of stiff pasteboard 6x8 1-2 inches, cover it on one side with plush or satin over a layer of cotton, and line the underside with satin. On the plush, before it is put on the pasteboard, paint or embroider a spray of flowers on one side, or pretty sprays of embroidered flowers may be purchased and fastened on by blind stitches; on the other side attach one of the little thermometers which may be found at any fancy store, put a bow of satin ribbon below the thermometer, and a loop of the same sewed to the upper corners to hang it up by on the wall.

A GOOD roll cake is made from this receipt: Four eggs, the whites and yolks beaten separately, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar mixed with the flour, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little water. Bake in a quick oven, and in one sheet, in a large tin or dripping pan. Spread jelly over it very rapidly and roll it while it is still warm. It should be taken from the tin and be laid upon a damp cloth. Instead of jelly various other mixtures may be used; a thick boiled custard with grated cocoanut in it is excellent. Cooked chocolate dressing is also very nice.

A HANDSOME lambrequin for mantels is made of olive satin and crimson velvet. The sateen is a long strip, cut in points on the lower edge. Cut the velvet in diamond-shaped pieces, embroider a pretty design on each side, and place in your sateen in such a way that the velvet points will come between the others. Featherstitch these pieces down and tip each point with a tassel.

A NICE way to cook salt codfish is as follows: Soak a pound over night, and in the morning simmer in fresh water for an hour, chop finely and place in a saucepan, with over a pint of milk, two teaspoonfuls of butter and a little flour mixed well with milk. Let the whole come to a boil, beat an egg up, add to the fish, stir well, then serve while hot. This is a very palatable dish, especially for luncheon.

TO MAKE A PRETTY PORTFOLIO.—Take the covers of an old book; line with crimson silesia. For the outside take black satin; paint or embroider some pretty design on each side, and cover your books. Finish the edge with a silk cord, and fasten bows of ribbon at each corner with other ribbons, with which to suspend it.

A TOWEL folded several times and dipped in hot water and quickly wrung, and then applied over the seat of pain in toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. Headaches almost always yield to the simultaneous application of hot water to feet and back of the neck, and a cupful internally, hot as you can bear it.

JAM PUFFS.—Cut out some puff paste with a large round tin cutter, scoop out the center of half the rounds and fill them with jam, cover with the remaining halves. After moistening the edges of the paste with a little water, glaze with the whipped yolk of an egg and bake. When cooked, sprinkle the puffs with powdered sugar.

SEED CAKE.—Three eggs, one-quarter pound of fine flour, three ounces of butter, one-quarter pound of powdered sugar, one or two teaspoonfuls of carraway seeds; beat the butter to a cream, add the sugar, the yolk of one egg, and a third of the flour, and so on; whisk the whites and add last; bake in a moderate oven one hour.

IF YOUR old stand or small table needs upholstering to make it look respectable, try this way of doing it: Cover the top with dark, double-faced Canton flannel, then sew or tack a deep fringe around the edge. This can be bought in all colors and widths, and the wider or deeper it is, the prettier.

WHEN you are tired of plain boiled or fried eggs try this way of serving them for breakfast; butter a pie-plate and cover the bottom with fine bread crumbs, then break enough eggs for your family, and drop them on the plate, and cover with a layer of bread crumbs; sprinkle pepper and salt over this, and put some little lumps of butter over it. Bake in a quick oven for five minutes.

MILK WEED LAMP MAT.—A very pretty and inexpensive lamp mat can be made from the silk of milk weed. Gather the pods before they open and tie the silk in little clusters about an inch apart, with sewing silk of any color preferred; tie the cluster once tightly, then clip the ends, then draw tight and tie again; they will form little bulbs; then sew to covered pasteboard the same as for worsted mat.

"German Syrup"

A Cough and Croup Medicine.

For children a medicine should be absolutely reliable. A mother must be able to pin her faith to it as to her Bible. It must contain nothing violent, uncertain or dangerous. It must be standard in material and manufacture. It must be plain and simple to administer; easy and pleasant to take. The child must like it. It must be prompt in action, giving immediate relief, as childrens' troubles come quick, grow fast, and end fatally or otherwise in a very short time. It must not only relieve quick but bring them around quick, as children chafe and fret and spoil their constitutions under long confinement. It must do its work in moderate doses. A large quantity of medicine in a child is not desirable. It must not interfere with the child's spirits, appetite or general health. These things suit old as well as young folks, and make Boschee's German Syrup the favorite family medicine.

The Fact

That rheumatism is caused by a morbid condition of the blood, explains the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in curing this disease. We have many letters telling of cures which seem really wonderful. Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes or neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and restores the vital fluid to a healthy condition. Those who suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism should try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"For chronic rheumatism Hood's Sarsaparilla did more good than anything else I have ever taken." F. MILLER, Limerick Centre, Pa.

THERE was a click of the latch key in the front door about 12.30 a. m., and Mr. Job Shuttle stole softly upstairs. His spouse had not yet begun to dream dreams, but was awaiting him.

"Seems to me you are later than usual."

"Yes, a little, my dear," said Job. "You see I was elected K. of S. to-night."

"K. of S.? What's that?"

"Why, keeper of the seal, of course."

"Indeed? And about how long before I'm to be elected keeper of a seal-skin sacque?"

BETTER THAN A DOG.—"Aren't you afraid of tramps, living all alone as you are?" asked one Western woman of another.

"Not in the least. I am fully protected."

"Do you keep a dog?"

"No; they might poison a dog. I keep a large woodpile in the yard where it can be easily seen from the road. They never come any farther than the front gate."

What Men Like In Woman.

There is a certain something, which, for want of a better name, is called womanliness, and it is that which makes woman attractive to men. A great many virtues go to make up this one great possession and they are what men like in women.

Men like, in the first place, amiability in a woman.

They like a pleasant appearance.

They like the doing of little things that are pleasant to them.

They like the courtesy of the fireside.

They like women whose lives and faces are always full of the sunshine of a contented mind and a cheerful disposition.

They like an ability to talk well and a knowledge of the virtue of silence.

They like a motherliness big enough to understand the wants of the older, as well as the younger boys.

They like a disposition to speak good, rather than evil of every human being.

They like sympathy—which means a willing ear for the tale of sorrow or gladness.

They like a knowing how to grow old gracefully.

They like a knowledge of how to dress well, which, bye-the-bye, doesn't mean conspicuously. Men are most attracted by good material, plain draperies, and quiet colors; not by showy colors or designs.

They like a companion—a woman who has sufficient knowledge of the world and its ways to talk well with them, who is interested in their lives and their hopes, who knows how to give a cheering word, or to listen quietly and by a tender look express the grief which the heart is feeling.

They may sometimes say that children are a bore and a nuisance, but a man shrinks from a woman who openly declares her dislike of them. A man expects the maternal instinct in a woman, and is disappointed if he does not find it.

They like women to be affectionate—there never was a man yet, no matter how stern, no matter how cold, no matter how repressive as far as his own feelings were concerned, who did not like a loving squeeze of the hand, or a tender kiss from the woman nearest to him.

These are some of the things that men like in women.

ON SHARES.—Wilkins—"How about that bill you undertook to collect on shares?"

Lawyer—"You said I could have half of it, didn't you?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I've collected my half. Can't get yours."

A FATAL DUEL.—"It is awful. Henderson and de Pell fought a duel, and de Pell was dreadfully hurt—in fact he died."

"Did Henderson shoot him?"

"Oh, no. Poor Chollie died of fright, don't you know."

THE PINK OF PROPRIETY.—He—"Now, Miss Evelyn, you wouldnt kiss a young man under any circumstances, would you.

She—"Of course not."

He—"And why?"

She—"Because he should take the initiative."

THE EVILS OF POVERTY.—Small Boy (after a visit from his rich uncle)—"How much is that family?"

Confectioner—"Fifty cents a pound."

Small Boy—"How much is all in the case?"

Confectioner—"All? It would be worth thirty or forty dollars."

Small Boy (gloomily)—"Uncle only gave me ten dollars."

Never Surpassed.

Intemperance, gluttony, exposure, excesses and evil habits of all sorts vitiate the blood, taxes the vital forces and embarrass the functions of the important organs of digestion, nutrition and excretion. The body becomes disordered and sick and the healthy action of nature is hindered. Carnrick's ——, the old monarch who wields the sceptre, found the St. Bernard Vegetable Pill the best and most sure by stimulating the torpid liver, kidneys, skin and bowels. A dose of the St. Bernard Vegetable Pills will be sent free to all applicants. Address, St. Bernard, Box 2616, New York.

With "No Trade Secrets to Keep," came a little book we kindly know how to name. It is called "SECRETS AND SECRETS: Points for Practical Tree Planters." The title is altogether too modest—does not give a notion of its real value. It is chock full of practical information gathered during from the highest sources, and just the information one wants. We have not space to tell what it is like. We can only say, SEND FOR THE BOOK, for Stark Bros., Louisiana, Mo., will send it free to all.—Farmers' Call.

GAVE HIM HIS CHOICE.—Conductor "Ticket please!"

Dead Beat—"I travel on my cheek."

Conductor—"Very well; which cheek do you prefer to travel on?"

HE WAS ALWAYS CHASING IT.—"You ought to have a weather-vane on your barn.

"Why so?"

"So that you can tell which way the wind blows."

"Oh, that's onnecessary. She wears a straw hat the hull year round."
