SENTINEL & REPUBLICAN

MIFFLINTOWN.

WEDNESDAY, MAR. 4, 1891.

B. F. SCHWEIER,

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

NEW ORLEANS is reported to have 25 cases of Leprosy.

REEDSVILLE, Mifflin county, is to have a National Bank with a capital of $50,000.

IT is rumored that Senator Quay, will soon bring a suit for libel against men who defamed him.

G. G. ROYER of Harrisburg was elected by the Altoona encampment, commander of the G. A. R., of Pennsylvania.

THE department encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania, will meet in Pittsburg next year.

NEVADA promises to become the paradise for prize fighters, as a bill has been introduced in the Legislature licensing bare knuckle fights.

THE Illinois flying machine can't fly. The flying machine will come once it is possible to construct an apparatus lighter than air, and strong enough to carry a propeller to drive it in any direction, but not till then.

THE silver pool committee appointed by Congress, have unamiously reported that they found no silver pool among Congressmen to advance the price of silver. The few Congressmen who purchased silver made their purchases and sold before Congress passed on the silver question.

SAYS the New York Press: Here is another one about the home prices of cereals. The price of wheat in eight farming States is 66 cents per bushel. In eight manufacturing States, 91 cents per bushel; 38 per cent. higher in manufacturing States. And does not a bill to increase home manufacturing give a market for many bushels more of wheat? Why, certainly!

THE Democrats have quit talking about the McKinley bill. Just as soon as the bill was passed the jobbers and importers of New York raised the price of their goods, and then they all in chorus, blamed the advance of the price of the goods on the McKinley bill that had not gone into operating, and thus the Democracy won the present Congress by a falsehood. A lie sometimes will win a cause, but it will not stay won.

Mine Horror.

On the 24th of February, four men were rescued alive from the coal mine at Jeansville, Pa., where they had been imprisoned 19 days by a flood of water, that broke into the mine in which they were working from an adjoining abandoned mine. One of the men was able to relate in broken sentences, the awful experience, which was sent by a reporter to the Philadelphia Record as follows:

No one but God can tell, or even know what we suffered. I never expected to see daylight again. I lay down to die.

"I did'nt think we would live another day. The other men were failing. I thought they were dying Some were praying for life, and others were asking for water. I carried water to them as long as I could. I would go down the breast and carry up a hatful of water. By the time I got up in the breast again the water had nearly all leaked through the hat.

"Sunday, I guess it was, I made my last trip. I could'nt go down for any more water. I did'dt mind the hunger so much. It was water I wanted.

"It kept us busy driving off the rats. If it had'nt been for me, I think the rats would have killed the rest of the boys. We could hear the rats running around and squealing. I am sure they were hungry.

"We did'nt eat anything after about what seemed to be the fourth day. On that day all our food gave out. We made a mistake. We all took to much the first three days. If we had not eaten so much, we would have had enough to have lasted us a week."

"We did'nt hear any noise at all when the men came to find us. The first I knew was when I felt a man take hold of my leg; then he pulled me. We had rubbed our legs and hands as long as we could to keep warm. On the third day we built a fire. It went out. Then we could'nt find another match and were in the dark all the time. We got mixed up on the days—couldn't tell what day in the week or what hour of the day it was."

"To the talk that several of us might live by eating one of the others, I, who was then the strongest, said: 'No! I will starve first; but if one of us should die, why, of course, the rest of us would have to eat the body.' On the tenth day we had nothing left in our dinner pails. I started out in the darkness to see if I could find anything. I stumbled over a dinner can. There was a little flitch, bread and molasssus in the kettle. I was so hungry that I could not wait till I got to my companions. I ate the flitch; it was selfish in me to do it, but I did it; when I came up to my friends I gave them the bread.

"The question now was, where were we to get more food? I was growing weaker all the time. I resolved to slaughter the rats. This I did with a club. We ate the legs."

The rescuing party got the four remaining men out of the mine at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Awful.

GREENVILLE, M., Feb. 25—The killing of W. T. Anderson a section foreman of the Ga. Pacific road at Stoneville, yesterday, by his wife, aided by her unlawful companion, a planter named Scurry, was one of the most sensational tradgedies ever enacted in Mississippi.

Mrs. Anderson left her three children on Monday, and did not return until yesterday. Her departure was to keep an appointment with Scurry. Scurry met her at the depot as she arrived yesterday, and giving her a pistol told her to go and shoot her husband.

Holding it in her hands she walked toward her house, only a few steps from the train, in which her husband and children were. The little ones, seeing their mother's return, were filled with joy. But the wronged husband, seeing her approach, started to meet her with his pistol in his pocket. They met on the porch, and without a word the wife aimed the pistol at her husband's head.

Drawing his own Anderson knocked her pistol from her hand and hit her in the face with his. A few people from the train gathered about, and a negro disarmed Anderson. The wife went to some place near the train and re-armed herself with another pistol and hatchet. Then she returned accompanied by Scurry, who called on Anderson to come out of the house and he would kill him.

Anderson being unarmed and fearing Scurry, who was armed, kept within. Amid the screaming of her little children, the woman with Scurry, then kicked open the door, and both leveled their revolvers at Anderson. Scurry's pistol snapped fire. The wife fired and shot Anderson in the thigh.

Anderson grappled with Scurry, and in the scuffle received another and fatal shot from his wife's pistol, the ball entering his head just below the temple. The woman then rushed out of the house, brandishing her pistol wildly. As she ran she exclaimed: "I shot him! I have, killed him!"

The woman and Scurry have been arrested. Mrs. Anderson married Anderson fourteen years ago. She comes of good parents. She is 30.

A Spring Tour to the National Capitol via the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The last tour of the season from Pittsburg to Washington via Pennsylvania Railroad, will leave Thursday, March 5th, and from the amount of space already engaged those who think of going would be wise to purchase tickets immediately.

These excursion tickets, good for ten days from date of sale, admitting of a stop-over in Baltimore in either direction within the proper limit, will be sold from Pittsburg at $9.00, and at correspondingly low rates from other stations in Western Pennsylvania. The tickets will be good for use on any regular train of the dates above named, except limited express trains; and in addition to the regular service a special train of parlor cars and day coaches will leave Pittsburg, at 8.00 A. M., and run through to Washington, stopping at principal stations. The return coupons will be valid for passage on any regular train within the return limit, except the Pennsylvania Limited.

The rates are unusually low, and the limitation of the tickets ample for a most pleasurable trip.

It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family medicine. It will cure sick headache in one night. Life of General Sherman.

No literary announcement of the year is of greater interest to the general public than that of a comprehensive Life of General Sherman, which is about to be published and sold through agents by the noted house of Hubbard Brothers, of Philadelphia, Admirable biographies of of Grant and Sheridan, complete to the time of their death, and already familiar to the public, but a life of the third great commander, to finish series, has been lacking. The various biographies of Sherman hitherto published have necessarily been incomplete; and even his own memoirs, written in 1875, said almost nothing of his intensely interesting early life, and not a word, of course, of the more than twenty years of social activity and fraternity with old comrades since the war.

The work which is now to be issued will splendidly supply the widely felt demand for a history of the great strategic commander. It is being written by General O. O. Howard, a man of fine literary attainments, who knew Sherman better than any other of his comrades now living, and ranked next but one to him in the army, and by Willis Fletcher Johnson, whose ability as a historian is familiar to the reading public of America through his former unusually popular works, which have had millions of readers, and the sales of their vast editions enriched an army of book agents. That this history of Sherman, the last of the great, Generals will surpass all others in popularity is not to be doubted.

The story of this great General's career is of a marvellous march from the mountains of time to the sea of eternity. Of the three great war heroes, Sherman was by far the most interesting personality. He was the best known to the public and the best loved for his genial disposition and warm sympathy with the popular heart. He has joined his illustrious compeers in the eternal bivouac of the dead. He is a life to study—to emulate—and is a profound inspiration. The forthcoming volume will tell the whole story of his marvellous career, and from the authorship engaged upon it, we are assured it will be told in a way that enthral the attention and interest of every reader from first to last. It is a book every American will want and one every American youth should read. It will doubtless be the best life of the great chieftain published, and we predict for it wonderful popularity.

Robert McAlister.

General Robert McAlister, died at his home in Belvidere, N. J., on the 25th day of February. He was born in Fayette township, Juniata county, on the 1st of June 1813, near where his grandfather, Hugh McAlister, settled in 1760. During a number of years he lived on the homestead farm in Fayette township, and was an active participant in the county militia trainings, filling the offices of Lieutenant, Captain; Lieutenant Colonel, Colonel and Brigadier General. In 1848 he turned his attention to contracting, and was engaged in railroad building in New Jersey when rebellion broke out. When Sumpter was fired on, he practically assisted in raising a company of New Jersey volunteers and when the first New Jersey regiment was organized, he was commissioned its Lieutenant Colonel. It would take a book to chronicle the events of his military career. He was in every pitched battle of the Army of the Potomac, excepting South Mountain and Antietam. He was wounded in the right foot and left leg at the battle of Gettysburg, which kept him out of the saddle three months. When the war closed he had won the rank of Brevet Major General. The present active generation in Juniata, know little of the General, personally, but the older generation remember him, and speak in the highest terms of his energetic and manly qualities. His funeral took place in Belvidere, N. J., Friday, February 27, 1891

Black Turned White.

From the Reading Times.

Dr. John Ege, of this city is happy and feels that he is a bigger man than Dr. Bhilips of New York, who failed to attach a boy to a dog's leg, for his experiment of grafting the skin of a negro on the leg of a white man has proved a success. Ten days ago, Dr. Ege, performed the operation on Joel Saul, who has been suffering with a sore leg for two years. The skin was taken from the arm of the negro in small pieces —the size of a pin's head. The surface of the sore was 6x8 inches, and thirty particles of skin were transplanted from the negro's arm. Friday night the Dr. reported that the sore had been reduced to two by three inches, and that it was healing rapidly. The particles of transplanted skin have changed color and the surface is now as white as though the new new cuticle were a self-made article.

As the colored skin attached itself to the leg of Mr. Saul it began to swell up like a "water blister," and in seven days from the time the operation was performed the top came off taking all the color with it and leaving the skin white and clean.
