Though hidden in a sure retreat, The roses' blushes soon betray Their secret, and the thorns that meet Around them cannot once affray The plunderer who seeks such prey, For he will pluck them, and in pride Upon his breast will wear the spray Where roses pass, but thorns abide.

Atasi the hours have flying feet.
And Pleasure will not deign to stay
For anything that readss entreat,
For anything that men can say.
To sigh and prayer she an ewers "Nay."
All for her point must provide,
Or they will find to their dismay
That roses pass but thorus abide.

ENVOY. Princes, pluck roses on your way.

Flamand in Algeria, which will interest archæologists. He has found certain wells upon which figures of men, women, and children, evidently prehistoric, are represented. The stones also show the figures of horses, cattle, ostriches, and elephants, though the elephant has not inhabited this region within historic times. Further details are expected.

Tempering Steel by Electricity.— Another useful sphere has been found A celebrate l aeromant asserts, after for the electric carrent which, it is stlent investigation, that the ninth day said, is in successful use at the gun factory of St. Etienne, France, for hole twenty-eight, and 4 o'clock in tempering springs. The latter consists the afternoon the raimest hour of the of steel wire wound spirally. By passbeen shipwrecked, "how did you feel ing a current of 23 amperes at 45 volts when you were floating far away from through them, rapid heating results, land on those boards?" and when the required temperature has been reached the circuit is broken and the springs fall into a trough of water. By this method, a workman, it is said, can temper 2,400 springs a

Amongst the latest ideas in medical investigation is that of discovering an antidote for the electric shock. An amateur investigator in America, is reported to have found that the insertion of aromatic spirits of ammonia into the body of a bird which had received a shock brought the animal back to life after all signs of animation had disappeared. a result would follow in the case of a human being, is of course unknown, but the subject is one well worth the scientific attention. The Nicaragua Canal.

The assertion is sometimes made that the Nicaragua Canal will not benefit us infregard to the increase of the number of our ships, and this assertion is based on the fact that France failed to add a single ship to her carrying fleet by the completion of tha Suez Canal, built by French engineering, French enterprise and French capital. The fact is brought forward as a lesson in history which we must hear in mind when we are asked to consider the Nicaragua Canal question as an element in the development of our commerce. At the present day the Suez canal chiefly devoted to the carrying trade of England, and England owns a tighting interest in the stock. We hold in regard to the Nicaragua canal that the United States will, no matter who builds it, take the same position that England could not fail to attain in the use of the Suaz canal. England possesses an immense, flourishing and steadily increasing commerce in the of France there are comparatively

Like England in the East, we have extensive possessions in the West on our Pacific shore, California, Oregon, Washington and Alaska, all very flourishing, while their productive ness is steadily increasing. It must, without fail, stimulate our shipbuilding trade when, by a shorter and safer transit, the natual commerce will receive a most powerful impulse,

All the European ocean-faring nations are even more interested in the Nicaragua canal than in the Suez canal, because by passing it they will avoid the stormy ocean of the extreme southerly coast of South America the sailing around which is a great deal worse than sailing around the Cape of Good Hope .- [Scientifie
