SENTINEL & REPUBLICAN

MIFFLINTOWN.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1893.

B. F. SCHWEIER,

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

THERE is blood in the eye of the Frenchmen, because England prevented the Khedive of Egypt from selecting his own Cabinet officers. England wanted to play the big boss with Egypt, and France says it shall not be done.

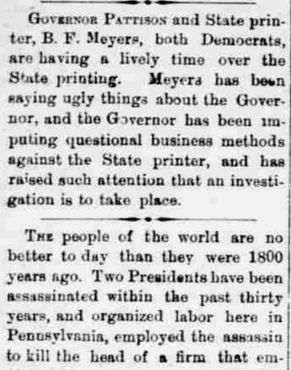
THE trouble in Hawaii seems to be between the foreign and native element. The Queen proposed to adopt a new constitution to disfranchise all foreigners, and put the whole government in the hands of native politicians. The foreign element was to strong, and broke up the government and dethroned the Queen.

GOVERNOR PATTISON and State printer, B. F. Meyers, both Democrats, are having a lively time over the State printing. Meyers has been saying ugly things about the Governor, and the Governor has been imputing questional business methods against the State printer, and has raised such attention that an investigation is to take place.

THE people of the world are no better to day than they were 1800 years ago. Two Presidents have been assassinated within the past thirty years, and organized labor here in Pennsylvania, employed the assassin to kill the head of a firm that employed them at Homestead, and also employed the poisoner to poison the food of laborers who do not belong to their union organizations.

THE Hawaiian Islands have a revolution on hands. The bulk of the trade of the Islands is with this country, and the traders or commercial men express a desire to be annexed to the United States. Annex them. Annexation must become the policy of this government in its relation to other countries, just as it was the policy of the Roman government 2,000 years ago.

SOUTHERN fire eaters are re-writing up, B. F. Butler, recently deceased. They all consign him to the region of everlasting torment for the way he treated the Southern cause and its impudent people, in his department, during rebellion. Some other people believe Butler is now a saint. Ones belief on the question of slavery and freedom has a good deal to do with their belief as to whether he is in Abraham's bosom or in the hot place, begging for a drop of water to cool his parched tongue.



JAMES G. BLAINE.

HON. JAMES GILLESPIE BLAINE died at 11 o'clock on Friday morning, January 27, 1893. He was born in Brownsville, Pa., January 31, 1830, and after his school days at Washington College he went to Kentucky, and there taught school. While in that State he married Miss Harriet Stamwood, of Maine, who was then a school girl in Kentucky. He returned to Pennsylvania, and studied law, but the clients were few and the fees small and he was compelled to seek a livelihood in some other occupation. He became a teacher in the Pennsylvania Institute for the Instruction of the Blind in Philadelphia, and taught there two years. In 1855 he moved to Maine and assumed editorial charge of the Kennebec Journal. In 1858 he was elected to the Legislature of Maine. In 1862 he was elected to Congress. Rebellion was then at its flood tide. Blaine's ability as a public speaker and his intensely patriotic expressions made him prominent before the whole country, and from that time up to the hour of his death public attention was constantly centered upon him. He excelled in the ability to express himself clearly and attractively on every subject that he gave close attention to, and his utterances were so close to the heart and mind of the people of the Northern states that he was the chief public speaker among the champions of popular government, reciprocity, and protection to American industry. His funeral took place on Monday. Interment at Washington.

IF gold in sufficient quantity existed in the world to float the bonded indebtedness the single gold standard would be all right, but as there are only about three thousand million gold in existence the folly of attempting to much longer carry the indebtedness on such slim basis is clearly to be seen. A break must take place somewhere. The re-instatement of silver to its true position as money by giving it the rights of free coinage will save the world from a great financial crash and stop the downward tendency of the price of a good deal of property. Silver will again come to the front when the crash takes place, but it amounts almost to a crime to allow the gold experimenters and speculators to drive the civilized world to such extremities.

What Hawaii Is.

The kingdom of Hawaii consists of fifteen islands in the North Pacific, only eight of which are inhabited. They are about 2,100 miles from San Francisco. The population is about 80,000, and the total area is 6,640 square miles. Of the population in 1890, 34,436 were natives, 15,301 Chinese, 12,360 Japanese, 8,602 Portuguese, 1,928 Americans, and 1,344 British. Nine-tenths of the trade of the islands is with the United States. The exports consist mainly of sugar, rice, bananas and hides.

Honolulu, the capital, on the island of Oahu, is lighted by electricity, and nearly every leading family in the town has its telephone. In 1890, 295 vessels visited the islands. The naval and military forces of the islands consist of the household guards, fixed at sixty-five men. There are no volunteer military organizations.

David Kalakaua, the seventh and probably the last king of the Hawaiians, was born in Honolulu on November 16, 1836. He was educated in the royal school at Honolulu. He married the chieftainess Kapiolana in 1863, and after the death of Prince Lunalilo, on February 3, 1874, he announced himself as a candidate for the throne, Prince Lunalilo having failed to proclaim a successor. Emma, the widow of Kamehameha IV., the queen dowager, was also a candidate. Kalakaua was elected by an extra session of the Legislature.

Queen Emma's partisans attacked the legislature, but were dispersed by marines from the American and British warships in the harbor, and the king was installed. Queen Liliuokalani is the eldest sister of King Kalakaua, who died on January 20, 1891, in San Francisco. She succeeded to the throne. Her husband John O. Dominis, long resided in Hawaii. Mr. Dominis accompanied Queen Kapiolani, Kalakau's consort, and the dethroned Queen Liliuokalani to this country in 1887.
