but now, in stead of blowing off to lesward, as it did uatrimonial lottery. awhile ago, it hangs close around the stage in a thick, dense, reddish-yellow cloud, almost shutting off the view from the passengers inside, if they cared to look out. But the beauties of nature aid : hold their interest only slightly, just at present. The dust occupies their attention to a large extent. It fills their mouths, and eyes, and nostrils, and clings to their hair and ears in much profusion. It is disagreeable-very; and the man who has enough spirits left to try to keep up the conversation is voted an ass by his fellow-passengers.

They were all very friendly only a short time ago; but they hate each other with a bitter hatred just now-all on account of the fust. Dust is a great destroyer of good humor.

Somehow, the dust doesn't rise very high, or else the driver and the passenger on the box don't mind it, for we can hear them talking. Old Ben, through some unseen but easily imagined influence, has relaxed from his usual taclturnity, and is quite communicative to the beardless, beyish-looking young chap who got on back at Alpena and is sharing the box with him.

As the singe reaches the level and colls into the shadows of the mountain and the tall pincs, Ben points with the whin to the mouth of the narrow pass leading out of the canyon a quarter of s mile away, and remarks:

"See them two big rocks-road run. b'tween 'em. Uh-huh, Wal, right thar-mebbe a couple rods 'r so fu'ther on-was what I was helt up one day in strong, rather masculine chin-in which, th' summer of '76."

"about half a century since the relic was purchased by a furniture-dealer. who slept in it for many years and showed it to the curious. It was well preserved, being formed of oak, and having a high polish." Many great personages seem to be careful that their importance should be reflected, as it were, in the luxari-ous appointments of their sleeping apartments. True, it is said on one occasion when a Persian ambassador was shown into his bedroom in a certain hotel, where a grand canopied state-bed had been prepared for him, he supposed it was a throne in his audience chamber, received his visitors seated on it, and retired to sleep on the carpet in the corner of the room. But Eastern potentates show as a rule a much greater appreciation of costly beds. A remarkable bedstead was made in Paris for an Indian Prince, who paid thousands of pounds for it. It was constructed partly of silver, with large female figures at each corner, each holding a delicate-looking fan. The weight of the sleeper's body sets certain machinery in motion which causes the figures to keep the fans gently in motion-an ingenious luxury in a hot climate. By touching a spring. a large musical box is made to give forth soft music as a further incentive to slumber. Another bedstead made of silver is said to have been occupied by the German Emperor during his visit to the Sultan. It had Oriental curtains of surpassing richness, heavily embroidered with gold. What a contrast this presents to the simple from camp beds affected by Prince Bis-marck, Moltke, and other renownde dealers! Among numerous presents sent to a Shah of Persia by one of the Russian Emperors was a bedstead of extraor-dinary magnificence. It is said to have been entirely made of crystal, introduced into New England, but all and was accessible by steps of the same attempts to domesticate it have proved material all worked in imitation of large diamonds, incrusted in a solid
