What roost interests me is that as it moved on through the deep it left the waters flashing and resplendent. In the works of the text, "He maketh a path to shine after him." What roos that illuminou path? It was phosphorescence. You find it in the wake of a ship in the night, especially after rough weather. Phosphorescence is the lighting of the sea. That this fligure of speech is correct in describing its appearance I am certified by an incident. After crossing the Atlantic the first time and writing from Basic, Swinetland, to an American magnatine an account of my voyage, to which nothing more fassinated me than the phosphorescence in the ship's wate, I called it to flighting of the sea. Betarring to my hotel, I found a book of John Ruskin, and the first sentience my eyes fell upon was his description of phosphorescence, in which nothing more fassinated me hands also magnatine and some expense got possession of the magnature of the manuscript, and with great labor and some expense got possession of the magnature posses that his construction is the called it "the lighting of the sea."

Bown to the postoffice I hastened to get the manuscript, and with great labor and some expense got possession of the magnature of the sea. Called it "the lighting of the sea."

There are times when from horizon to horizon the entire ocean seems in confingration with this strange splender as it changes every moment to tamer or more dazzling color on all sides of you. You sit looking over the taffeal of the yacht or ocean steamer, watching and waiting to see what new thing the God of beauty will do with the Atiantie. If is the ocean in transfiguration, it is the marine world casting its garments of glory in the pathway of the Alimighty as He waiks the deep; it is an inverted firmament with all its stars gone down with it. No pleture can present it, for photographer's camera cannot be success.

This phosphorescence is the appearance of myriads of the minual kingdom rising, falling, playing, flashing, living, dyar, falling, playing, flashing, living, dyar, there immines animalcules for marry 100 years have been the study of naturalisas and have brain enough to think. Now, God, who puts in His Bible nothing trivial or useless, calls the attention of Job, the greatest scientist of his day, to this phosphorescence, and as the levintant of the deep sweeps past points out the fact that "he maketh a path sout the fact that "he maketh a path

CARRIES A CURIOUS CANE

Cincinnati Man's Walking Stick Ornsmeated by Some Grewsome Mementors. The other afternoon an old man ittracted a good deal of attention on ine street, Cincinnati, by reason of the peculiar cane which he carried. Personally he was in no way different from lots of other old men that one is apt to meet in a day's walk about the streets of a great city. He was undersized, fat and red as to his nose. His beard was gray and was long. It needed a shampoo. The man's dress was of ordinary quality, but it was all there. His breath was ta nicd with fire water. As he was passing a store a clerk asked him where he got the cane It was an old stick and without knot or crook. Wound around and around it was a string of ornaments of the strangest kind. Here was a hickory nut, there a beech nut, there a walnut, and other nuts could be seen on the stick. Then there were buttons of all varieties. Some were Probably many would regard it as pants buttons, others were coat and
