

MAY, SWEET MAY.

In the so-called soft May breeze... Forests don their kirtles green...

Mary and Ben and Dan'l.

W. J. LAMPTON. I GUESS I ain't much on the shoot no'...

side of me. Mary a one, 'n' Ben a one, 'n' Dan'l a one...

"I never got beat but once," he went on, with a good-humored reminiscence...

"Well, sir, you could a knocked me down with a splinter, and I got hot all over, but I set my jaws down hard for a minute and held in, thinkin' about them wads."

"And he didn't beat me shootin', after all!" says I, feelin' mighty good over it, all at once.

"No, he didn't," says she, pattin' me on the arm like as ef she was my mother. "But he did beat me, says I, droppin' back a p'ce or two."

"Yes," says she, "but I put him up to it, Dan'l."

"Then she smiled, and I thought the sun was risin' and tell I:

"Mary," says I, "you've got more sense than Ben and I got put together, peckerly me, and I'm glad you've got the one you wanted, and with that I jumped on my horse and rid lickety split for home, and when I got that I just hugged that rifle of mine as ef it had been Mary Higgins."

"Dan'l," called the old man's wife from the kitchen, at this point, "supper's ready."

"So air Lizzy," he said, rising. The visitor looked at him inquiringly, as he rose to accompany him supperward.

"Yes," smiled the old man, "she's the same that was the new gal on the Fork the night Mary and Ben got hitched."—Detroit Free Press.

George Curzon, the English Member of Parliament, recently returned from a seven months' tour of the far East, and in giving a Pall Mall Budget man an account of his wanderings said that he had visited the ruins of Angkor, an ancient Cambodian city, with remains of the most magnificent and stupendous character. He photographed the temple of Angkor Wat, which, it is supposed, was built by the Khmers, who came from India between A. D. 700 and 1100. The ruins of these temples are all paved, Mr. Curzon thinks are the most remarkable in the world. They are situated in the midst of a tropical forest. The forest growth is so thick that to approach them it is necessary to cut a way with billhooks. So dense was the undergrowth that the journey to some of the ruins was made in darkness. "So thick is the forest about them and so thoroughly are they hidden by the forest that many of the people in the neighborhood have forgotten the actual site."
