

The Coxyite movement may result in general good. It will give the country a chance to deal with the tramps in a collective capacity. They are hard to deal with as single wanderers.

Breckinridge and Pollard.

The Pennsylvania Methodist, published at Harrisburg, suggests, that Breckinridge be divorced from his wife number 3, and then he and Miss Pollard should marry, go south, and hide from the public eye. Repent, repent.

"While the lamp holds out to burn, The vilest sinner may return."

COXEY.

The Washington Star publishes an interview with Coxe, as to who he is. Coxe said:

"I was born," said Mr. Coxe, "at Selinsgrove, Pa., on Easter Sunday, 1854, and four years after my parents removed to Danville in the same State. Up to thirteen years of age I went to school pretty regularly, but from the time I was ten years old I have worked for my living. When I was fourteen years of age school for me was abandoned, and I went to work in a rolling mill, where I carried water and did other small work. Later on I was promoted to more important work in the mill and at sixteen I was running a small mill engine. I was an engineer for eleven years, and in 79 I went into the scrap iron business in Pennsylvania. Two years after I removed to Ohio and bought the stone quarries at Massillon, and have been engaged in that business and the breeding and raising of horses ever since."

"Originally I was a democrat, but when that party got away from the principles of finance which I believed in I abandoned the party and for years voted and worked for the greenback party. I have attended all but one of the greenback conventions since, '79. In 1885, without my knowledge I was nominated on the greenback-labor ticket for State Senator and stamp the country."

ARREST THE VAGABONDS.

The Montana division of Coxe's army stole a North Pacific Railroad freight train with locomotive on Wednesday, April 25, and started for Washington, having 580 individuals on board. The railroad is in the hands of a receiver, and the United States Court immediately authorized a United States Deputy Marshal with 74 deputies to capture the industrial thieves and return the stolen train. The Marshal on a special train gave chase and overtook the thieves at Billings, Montana, and proposed to arrest the leaders of the gang, but arrest was resisted, a fight took place in which a number on each side were wounded. The Coxyites surrounded the Marshal and his deputies, took their guns and broke them and ordered the Marshal and his posse out of town. Governor Richards, of Montana, called on President Cleveland for troops and five hundred United States troops from Fort Keogh, were immediately sent to catch the Coxyites. The train of tramps were captured at Forsyth, Montana, where they had taken a new engine and were about ready to continue their journey. One hundred of them got away before the troops surrounded the train. Three of the men captured were found to be wounded, they having received the injuries in the fight with the deputies. The half dozen of men who led the army will be tried, convicted and sentenced in the United States Court for stealing a train and disobedience of an injunction of an United States Court. The rank and file have been retrograded back to Butte where they started from. Every American and every foreigner has the right to travel unobscuredly on the railroads, and on the public roads, provided he pays his own way and goes peacefully in the pursuit of his pleasure or business, but not one man or thousand men or a hundred times that many have the right to tramp through the country and by scaring people along the way, compel them to provide provisions and bars and places to lodge in, and transportation, railroad or otherwise. It is time the Coxyite tramp nuisance be abated. Arrest them by peaceful process if that will do and if it will not do, abate them by force. The nuisance has to be met and the best way is to meet it now. The American people are presumed to be a civilized people, and have provided a civilized way of taking care of the needy people in every community, so that there is no occasion for tramping armies as the Coxyite movement to endanger the rights of the law abiding and industrious people of the country. Arrest the Vagabonds.

A LARGE PILE OF SILVER.

On Tuesday, April 24, Vault C, in the United States Treasury at Washington, was opened by the proper officers for the purpose of counting $50,000,000 silver dollars stored there. There was some trouble in opening the combination of the second lock, but the seals were found intact, and so far as could be seen, the treasure was also. In fact the second lock had to be forced with a hammer and chisel, and was found only been sealed in 1890.

Many of the bags containing the silver were rotten, and considerable time will be consumed in putting the coin into new bags before weighing. In the weighing $1000 will be placed in each bag. This will require 50,000 bags, which will be weighed at an average of 1000 bags daily.

A certificate covered with wax formed the seal on the inner door of the vault. From this it was learned that the signers of the document, "representing the Director of the Mint and Superintendent of the United States Mint at Philadelphia," certify that on February 7, 1893, the doors of Vault C were closed on the sum of $30,000,000 standard dollars, placed therein for storage by Major Melius, representing the Treasurer of the United States. That on May 25, 1891, the vault was opened and the further sum of 17,000,000 silver dollars was deposited. The vault was locked and sealed on June 6, 1891, and has not since been opened.

The seal on the door was a diagram showing the different compartments of the vault and the number of dollars each contained, and also to indicate the storing of the bags of silver was carried.

When the second lock had been made to work and the inner door was opened it was found that the dampness had rotted many of the bags piled next to the walls of the vault and the pressure of the weight above had caused them to rip and pour the shining dollars upon the floor. The silver from the broken bags was placed in good ones, and the work of weighing and transferring the coin to another vault begun. For this purpose scales were erected within the vault, and from these the bags were loaded upon flat trucks and taken to their new place to remain until such another change in the official hand of the Mint occurs, when the same form will be repeated.

REBEL MEMORIAL DAY.

Last Saturday, April 28, was Confederate Memorial day, when the south turn out to decorate the graves of the Confederate dead, and to glorify their deeds on the field of battle to establish a slave empire. The Philadelphia North American on Monday published a despatch from Charleston, South Carolina on the occasion and among other things goes back and makes mention of the hard times to which the southern people were driven by the slave hold, their rebellion. Ask any matron today who was a girl of the war period how she lived, and she will tell you of tea made of assafras sweetened with sorghum sirup; of vinegar made of persimmons; of shoeblacking composed of sumac berries boiled with water, salt and soot; of candles made from beef tallow, with strips of old cloth for wicks, and vinegar balls split in half and soaked in the dripping of pork or other fatty substances; of buttons made of persimmon seed or cut from gourds; a paper of pins costing 85¢ of old garments and old carpets ripped, ravelled, carded, mixed, dyed and made to do duty in other shapes; of hats made of palm-leaf or straw, and shoes of rat and squirrel skins. In addition there was no wax and yet few of the harassing dilemmas of Flora MacFlinty.

Prices continued to raise steadily from 1881 to 1895. In the latter part 1893 flour was $1.00 a barrel, tea $1.00 per pound, coffee $1.00 per pound, bacon 81¢ 25¢ per pound butter $2 per pound, tobacco $4 per pound, sugar $2 per pound, soda $4 per pound, mail 1.50 per pound, whiskey $40 per gallon and later $150, kid gloves $50 per pair, which, when sold, were re-dyed with ink balls, calico $30 per yard boots from $250 to $800 per pair, and so on. A year later these prices were trebled and quadrupled. What wonder that the ingenuities of woman was put to its severest test!

But they were equal to the sacrifice. They drank cheerfully of coffee made of rye, wheat, sweet potatoes and ground nuts dried and parched. They used roots and herbs for medicines. Their envelopes consisted of wall paper or old pictures that were blank on one side, the mullage being furnished by the gum trees, which the ink was a composition of oak balls, green persimmons and rusty nails, the pigment of copra and the packing gesso supplied the pens.

When a number of sisters were in a family, they concealed their deficiencies by turning two half worn dresses into one. They borrowed freely from each other and took turns in staying at home. A single bride veil served for half a dozen weddings, silk stockings were patiently unraveled and transformed into neat fitting gloves.

Be Careful What You Give.

Be careful what you give to a newspaper for publication. Editors and newspaper publishers frequently receive information of bogus events that are intended as slurs or jokes on people. The editor or publisher relying on the truthfulness of the correspondent is as much misled as his readers and keenly feels the deception and wrong that has been practiced upon him and upon his readers.

To punish and to protect editors and publishers and the public from malicious writers the late Legislature in 1893, passed an act, that provides that any person willfully and maliciously giving untrue information to a newspaper for publication, and it is published, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment not exceeding two years.

ASSEMBLY.

Mr. Editor—As I have been repeatedly asked whether I was a candidate for reelection to the House of Representatives, I deem it not out of place, to thus publicly reply to all such interrogations. I am a candidate for reelection and respectfully ask the Republicans of Juniata for their support. During my present term I have served them honestly and faithfully as I have long kept their best interests as my aim, and my past service in their behalf should be a guarantee for my future action. Should I be so fortunate as to be again chosen as their Representative, and that chance be ratified by the people at the polls, my best service will always be to their disposal.
