'Tis a wearlsome world, this world of ours! With its tangles small and great.
Its weeds that smother the springing flowers And its hapless strifes with fate, But the darkest day of its desolate days been the help that comes too late,

Ah! wee for the word that is never said Till the ear is deaf to hear. And wee for the lack to the fainting head

What booteth help when the heart is numb?
What booteth a broken spar
Of low thrown out when the lips are dumb,
And life's barque drifteth far,
Olfar and fast from the alien past,
Over the moaning bar?

A pitiful thing the gift to-day
That is dross and nothing worth,
Though if if had come but yesterday
It had brimmed with aweet the earth,
A failing rose in a death-cold hand,
That perighed in want and dearth

Who fain would help in this world of ours, Where sorrowful steps must fall, Fring help in time to the wening powers Ere the bier is spread with the pail; or send receives when the flags are furled, And the dead beyond your call.

For balling most in this dreary world, With its tangles small and great, Its loncome nights and its weary days, And its struggles forlorn with late Is that bitterest grid, too drep for tears, Of the help that comes too late. - Margaret E. Sangater in Harper's Bazar.
