The Dome of the Capitol. In a sketch of "Washington as a Spectacle," in the Century. Marior Crawford says of the Capitol:

To the architect, the fact that the iome is of iron is a flaw in the no bility of the whole, but no ordinary eye can detect the change of material at that elevation. There are hours of the day, especially toward evening in spring, when there is a wonderful fascination in the distant view, as one approaches the Capitol along Fennsylvania avenue. It has a distinctness of proportion with a soft grace of outline, all in many tones of white against the misty evening sky, such as cannot be likened to anything in any other city. It suggests nothing ancient, nothing national, nothing old-fashioned, and yet it has nothing distinctly modernabout it.

Origin of the Dollar Mark. Not less than a score of theories have been advanced as to the origin of the dollar mark ($). Of these the St. Louis Republic believes the following to be the most plausible: 1. That it is a combination of the "U. S.," the initials of the United States. 2. That it is a modification of the figure 8, the dollar formally called a 'piece of eight."

3. That it is derived from a repretentation of the Pillars of Hercules, onsisting of two needle-like towers or illars connected with a scroll. The old Spanish coins marked with the pillar device were frequently referred to as "pillar dollars." 4. That it is a combination of "H. " the ancient Roman mark of money

5. That it is a combination of P. and S. from peso duro, signifying "hard In Spanish accounts peso is dollar.' contracted by writing the S over the P and placing it after the sum.

According to one writer the symbol of the dollar is a monogram of the letters "V," "S" and "J," the dollar being originally a "thaler" coined in the valley of Sant Joschim, Pohemia, and Dick-Hello, Jim! Where do you known as a "Joschim thaler," and the work now? Jim-Work? What yer monogram the initials of the words, givin' us? I don't work. I'm a "Valley Sant Joachim." The editor helper, 1 am .- Boston of the London Whitehall Review, a very able writer, in giving his opinion of "Reason No. 3, as given above, says: "The American symbol for dollar is taken from the Spanish dollar, and the origin of the sign, of course, must be looked for in associations of Spanish coins. On the reverse side of the Spanish dollar is a representation of the Pillars of Hercules, and around each pillar is a scroll with the inscrip-tion 'plusultra.' This device in course of time has degenerated into the sign which at present stands for American as well as Spanish dollars, '$.' The scroll around the pillars represent the two serpents sent by Juno to destroy Hercules in his cradle."

A Monster Petrifled Whale.

Leon del Mar, a Frenchman atsached to the surveying corps connected with the National Museum, San Jose, Costa Rica, reports a find of equal or greater value than the Montezuma (Col.), fossilized monster. Leo's find is not a "Dinosaur" or other half mythical creature which the lapse of ages has transformed into stone, but a common everyday whale, 216 feet in length, with bones mineralized intil they are as hard as jasper and as heavy as lead. The "Museo" officials are in a quandary, and are debating as to which would be the cheapest, to move their museum buildings over onto the mountain range where the petrified monster lies, or to try to transfer his flinty remains to the Costa Rican

The point selected by this antediluvian giant when he concluded to give up the ghost, along about the time of the close of the cretaceous or some other geological period, is a rift between two mountain peaks, seventytwo miles from San Jose and 3300 feet above sea level. There must have been a season of high waters in that section at one time. Either that or Del Mar's specimen was a regular mountair limber.—St. Louis Republic.
