The Republican tariff paid a bound to every acre of sugar produced in American soil, which stimulated home raised sugar, and sugar was never so low in price, but how changed since the democratic reform tariff knocked off the American bounty and put a tax on sugar and the result is, sugar has been raised a cent and a pound.

The Huntingdon Journal says: There are some men in this town, who would not accept work if they could get it. They have families to support and rent to pay. In great many cases the wife takes in wash and with this pittance pays the rent and clothes the children. The man goes out at night and steals from his more industrious neighbor, coal, potatoes, tomatoes and chickens. He steals his coal from the pits and, therefore, lives almost as "fat" as a man who works six days out of the week.

PLOT OF ROBBERY REVEALED.

George Rusk of Oriental, Juniata county, reveals a plot to rob farmer John Bailey of which the Sunday daily writes as follows: "For the past year the residents of Shamokin dam and the farmers living back of it have been annoyed by petty robberies. Smoke houses and cellars were robbed of meats and lard. Potatoes, grain and produce mysteriously disappeared, and all efforts to track the thieves were fruitless.

The victims watched with gus and a shiver, but on such occasions the thieves came not.

The revelation came several days ago, and a member of the gang gave the information to an intended victim. On Thursday last George Rusk walked from Oriental, Juniata county, to the farm of John Bailey, a case of fifteen miles and told Bailey of a plot to rob him. Rusk had mailed Bailey a letter, giving details of the plot, but was afraid he would not receive it in time and came to see him personally. Saturday night was the time fixed for the attempt on Bailey. The gang was to break into his house and bind and gag the family. If Bailey would not tell where his money was the thieves intended to torture him with fire until he would tell. The story of Rusk put an end to the plot. Bailey is a well-to-do farmer and lives near Fishers school house, about two miles from Shamokin dam.

Rusk also told of plots to rob the stores of J. M. Gross and E. R. Hottelstein at the Dam. The gang was to congregated at the stores on the evenings to be fixed and a member was to hide in the cellar and allow himself to be locked in. When the rest of the gang came later in the night he was to unlock the door from the inside.

Rusk said that one member of the gang acted as lookout and took the stolen stuff to Lewistown and sold it. He would not give the name of the man. He gave the names of four of the gang: George Hossinger, Norman Long, U. G. Heiser and Horace Krumbine. All these men live back of the dam and are employed by farmers. Hossinger and Heiser are married. Rusk said his courage failed him when he came to torture victims and the reason determined him to make a confession. He worked on the farm of John Hummel, back of the Dam, all summer and went to his home at Oriental about a week ago. He was to return and help the gang in the robberies at Bailey's house and at the Gross and Hottelstein stores. After telling his remarkable story, he started to walk back to Oriental.

Bailey did not tell the story at once, but when he did, it soon became the subject of gossip at the Dam. Many little evidences that confirm the story of Rusk have been brought out in conversations over the affair. Several of the men named have long been suspected, but no proof could be brought to substantiate the suspicion. It is thought that there are more men in the gang, and the names of five or six more are expected to be revealed. The farmers and people will soon take some action and will have the men arrested. Rusk's statement to Bailey was voluntary, and will have to be sworn to before anything can be done.

What a Boy Saw in the Army.

The above comprehensive title is the name given to a new book by Dr. Jesse Bowman Young, well known all over Pennsylvania, his native State, as a brave and gallant soldier of the war for the Union, as also a preacher, teacher, and writer of the high order.

The story is one of fascinating interest. Among the many books touching upon the events of the great civil war few that we have read are so graphic in description, so comprehensive and accurate in detail, so varied in incident, and so elegantly written as is this book from the pen of Dr. Young. To read it is to live over again the scenes and incidents of that tremendous struggle.

Dr. Young is master of a style as vigorous as it is picturesque, and his description of the battles, the sieges, the march, and indeed the whole paraphernalia of war gives him high rank as a writer of war literature.

His descriptions of the battles of Pittsburgh Landing, Fort Donelson, Frederickburg, Chancellorsville, and above all, Gettysburg, are worthy of a place alongside the "Iron Light" and "Chariot Race" in Ben Hur.

Every old soldier should have a copy of this remarkable book, and every family should secure it, and, above all, every boy who loves his country and his country's flag, and wants to learn of the sacrifices that were endured in order to preserve the integrity of the Union, should not fail to read this book.

We invite the attention of our readers to the advertisement in another column.
