In these days of swell notions of living, swell taxes and swell wages and swell notions of almost everything, almost everybody is carried into swelling and swelling expressions as if to swell is the sum total of living, and unless one can swell, they can't get along in this world. There is nothing further from the fact than just such false notions of life, and the every day lives of good, prominent and great and rich people in every state and county in America, disprove such notions. Hundreds of cases to prove the mistake of such notions could be quoted. One of the most noted cases is that of the Camerons in this State. For example, on the 14th of May, 1816, Simon Cameron, father of Senator Don Cam-Cameron was bound as an apprentice to learn the printing trade with Andrew Kennedy of Northumberland for three years and ten months, for the sum of $20 a year and board and clothing. People of swell notions of to-day, scoff at such conditions but in the end the swell gets the shell and the others get the oyster.

ABOUT INDIAN MONKEYS he Method They Employ W

It is still an article of faith, not only in India, but in all lands where monkeys go in packs, that they have a king, laws and language of course. Saving the first item and duly limiting the others, the belief is sound no doubt. But Ibn Batuta tells us, on the authority of pious persons" he met in India, that the king lives in state. Four noblemen always attend him with rods in their hands and cooks serve him on their

The king has a train of "armed followers." When a subject is caught, he contrives to send a message to the sovereign, who forthwith dispatches an army, and when they come to the town they pull down the houses and beat the people, and their armies, it is said, are many. This is not quite so ridiculous as it looks, for the sacred spee that frequent an Indian village will readily gather to avenge an injury, and it is a common practice with them to destroy the huts when angered.

They have a great many children, and when a child is unlike its father and mother it is thrown out on the high road. Then they are taken by the Hindoos, who teach them every sort of handicraft, or sell them at night, that they may not find their way home.

At Shabar, which appears to have been somewhere near Madras, people dare not travel by night in the woods, for fear of monkeys, which is certainly not exact, since these creatures never move after sundown, but if there be a Nantes, in France, by whom it was confoundation of truth in the legend it is curious. We are not aware that any Indian apes at this day will attack a passerby unless gravely provoked. But there are plenty elsewhere that will. It is a well known fact that in proceeding to raid the cornfields in certain parts of Africa apes have a combined plan of action. The old males go firstsome of them scout on either flank, and climb every eminence near the line of route is safe. After reconnoitering, they give orders in such different tones of voice that each must have a special meaning. The elders are silent when advancing, but the main body, females signal. Ite Peculiar Fitness For the Form of Com position Known as the Fugue. The organ as it existed in Bach's day, and as in most essentials it exists now, is an instrument peculiarly suggestive in regard to the realization of the finest and most complete effects of harmony, of modulation and of that simultaneous progression of melodies in polyphonic combination which is most completely illustrated in the form of composition known as the fugue. It is so for two or three reasons. In the first place it is the reference, state age and whether maronly instrument in which the sounds are sustained with the same intensity for | it g Co., 723 Chestnut Street, Phila. any required length of time after they Penna are first emitted. However long a note may have to be sustained, its full value is there till the moment the finger quits the key, a quality which is invaluable when we are dealing with long suspenfeet on the pedals, leaving the left hand fords. Thirdly, and in the case especialvolume and power of the pedal notes impart a grandeur to the entry of the bass part in the composition such as no other us. In the time of Bach this splendid source of musical effect was confined to the great organs of Germany.

The English organs of the day had in general no pedal board, and it is probably owing to this fact more than to anything else that Handel's published organ music is so light, and even ephemeral in style as compared with Bach's; that he treated the organ, as Spitta truly ob-serves, merely like h larger and more powerful harpsichord. Without the aid of the pedal it would be rather difficult to do otherwise, and the English organ of the day was in every respect a much lighter and thinner affair than the "huge house of the sounds," the thun-

POE KNEW ARGON.

Will Lord Rayleigh and Professor Ramsay have to share the honor of "spotting" the third constituent of the atmosphere with Edgar Allan Poe? It atmosphere with Edgar Allan Poe? It certainly looks like it, if we consider the evidence adduced by a correspondent of a French journal, who has been dipping into the "Tales of Mystery and Imagination." The passage upon which this gentleman rests Poe's claims is contained in "The Unparalleled Adventure of One Hans Pfaall." It is worth while quoting it in full:

"I then took opportunities of conveying by night to a retired situation east of Rotterdam five iron bound casks, to ontain about 50 gallons each, and one of a larger size; six tin tubes 8 inches in diameter, properly shaped and 10 feet in length; a quantity of a particular metallic substance, or semimetal, which I shall not name, and a dozen denijohns of a very common acid. The gas to be formed from these latter materials is a gas never yet generated by any other person than myself-or at least applied to any similar purpose. I an only venture to say here that it is a onstituent of azote (nitrogen), so long considered irreducible, and that its lensity is about 37.4 times less than of nydrogen. It is tasteless, but not odoress; burns, when pure, with a greenish flame and is instantaneously fatal to animal life. Its full secret I would make no difficulty in disclosing, but that it of right belongs to a citizen of ditionally communicated to myself."

It must be confessed that the mysterious gas evolved by the force of Poe's imagination has not a little in common with the argon, whose acquaintance we are now privileged to make some $0 rears later. The "particular metallic phstance or semimetal." used by Hans Pfaall, has its fellow in clevite, from which we have been led to understand argon has been extracted when treated march, to assure themselves that the with an acid, after the manner of the veracious Dutch balloonist. If the new gas is not precisely regarded as "a con-stituent of nitrogen," it has at least been declared by some to be an allotropic modification of it. No doubt the phys and young, keep up an incessant chatter, playing and feeding as they go, unless brought to an instantaneous halt by argon. But what of that? Instead, for argon. But what of that?
