The newspapers that published Barton's obituary were in too great a hurry. The Judge still lives, and the SENTINEL and REPUBLICAN hopes that he may be fully restored to health and live many years to come.

The Chambersburg Repository of August 28th, says:—The first officer, enroute car, loaded with peaches, left the Cumberland Valley station, Harrisburg, Saturday evening for Pittsburgh. It requires eight tons of ice to pack one car.

On to Lewistown to the Centennial on Thursday, is the watchword with a good many Mifflintown people. One hundred years ago Lewistown was more of a focal point for people in this valley than any town in Juniata county. Juniata county as a county was not then in existence.

Anson B. Will, Martin Crawford, James Speddy and Charles Howe drove to the Seven Stars tavern in the east end of the county, last Thursday, and after partaking of a fine class supper, provided by mine host Forre, they came home by light of the moon, highly pleased with the trip.

Factory Inspector J. K. Robinson called at the Cannery last Friday and discharged all the children under 16 years, instructing them not to come back to work, and notifying Mr. Wellington Smith, manager of the concern of the unlawfulness of the work of the Company in employing children under 16 years of age.

The friends of Senator Quay, who visited the headquarters at Harrisburg, during the Convention last week were pleased to find that the Senator had recognized the ability of at least one Juniata county boy, Carl F. Espenbade, and had him hard at work assisting Jere Rex, Secretary of the State Committee.

The matter of the purchase of dictionaries for the schools in Philadelphia is about to be investigated. Corruption is charged, and it looks as if the case will land in the hands of the District Attorney. The dictionary business has been extensively worked in the country districts, but the question has not been sufficiently looked into to see whether any crookedness exists, but as everyone is presumed to be innocent till proved to be guilty, it is presumed that the work of the boards in this county are straight. However as the schools belong to the public tax payers it may be well enough to make some inquiry into the work of the dictionary business outside of Philadelphia.

The Mount Pleasant Walker Trp. farm that belonged to the Hugh Hamilton estate, was sold at public sale on the 28th of August to Harrison Casner for $1,980.

The second annual picnic in Lost Creek Grove, will be held on Saturday, September 7, 1896. Grand march at 1 o'clock P. M., and the home walk at 10 o'clock P. M., sharp.

"Jerome Gerhard, proprietor of the spoke works at Swamp creek, Bucks county, on Thursday caught a five pound bass in an unusual manner. He was rowing in his dam and when near the tail race, where the water is shallow, a frightened bass jumped out of the water over the bow of the boat and landed on the rocks. In its struggle to escape it got its head in the crevice of the rocks and stuck fast. So firmly wedged was the fish that the rocks had to be pried apart to get it."

Executors Wilson and Adams of the estate of Jerome Thompson, deceased, sold at the Court House, the old Port Royal farm of 52 acres to Robert McMeen for $1375. The woodland of the same farm—42 acres to Wm. Groninger for $451. The undivided half of a tract of woodland near Tuscarora mountain to Porter Thompson for $60. The mansion house and store room in Mexico to Enos Waldeman for $765. The Black Rock farm to Uriah Shuman for $4435. The sale took place on Monday afternoon.

The peal of thunder that startled the people of this town about noon last Saturday, was a bolt of lightning that struck a corn stalk in Kurtz Kauffman's corn field near this town. Joseph Adams and son Joseph were coming to town in a two horse wagon loaded with wheat, and were on the lower grade of Mt. St. Hill when the bolt descended. It came in from the west and entered the field about 200 feet from the wagon. It was a startling blinding flash and terrifying peal of thunder. The horses all became unmanageable. A smoke rose from the ground where the bolt struck, and Mr. Adams was so impressed with the whole lightning performance that after he arrived home, he went to the field and found the lightning had struck only one corn stalk which it broke into a number of pieces, and tore some of it into shreds, but the corn was not really touched, and the general damage to the corn stalk was not more complete than the damage sometimes done by chestnut or walnut trees. Mr. Adams talks of digging where the lightning struck the ground to find the "Thunder Bolt," if such a thing really does exist.

DR. ATKINSON'S DITCH.
There was a copious rain on Saturday, and when it was over, Dr. Atkinson hastened to his farm in Walker township, a mile and a quarter from town to see how the water ran through his new ditch 2000 feet long. Engineer Gums of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company did the engineering, and it was well done for the water ran through the ditch satisfactorily to the Dr. and to Jacob Kauffman who constructed it. The ditch is through a piece of level land that is located between the Salina rock knoll, on which is located the farm buildings of the Dr. and Seth Kerchner on the west and the slight roll of Salina formation on which the farm of Cyrus Sieber is located. From time out of date springs of water flowed out of the Salina rock knoll of the Atkinson and Kerchner tracts into the little vale between them and Sieber's place. But away back in prehistoric times a Juniata river flood rushed over the place and a large quantity of pulverized White Medina sand stone with pebbles from the Conglomerate rock in Shade mountain settled in the vale as they were washed over the higher formation of the Doctor and Kerchner tracts, and made the level land that Atkinson is trying to reclaim to Agriculture. Of course the springs were in a measure covered, but the water from them filtered into the sand and pebbles and mud, and made a boggy place. That was centuries ago. We are told by people who make such things a study, that one hundred years of luxuriant growth of weeds and grass in required to produce three inches of vegetable mould. The vegetable mould in undisturbed places on the Doctor's flat land is 18 inches deep, therefore, if vegetable life began to develop luxuriantly immediately after the deposit of sand and mud and pebbles in the vale, it is more than six hundred years since the Juniata river flood made the boggy places on Atkinson's farm, that he is so assiduously trying to bring to a State of Agriculture. "Oh Lord, what is man that thou art mindful of him."
