The new king of Persia comes from princely stock run to seed.

EX KING MIKAS of Serbia is coming to the United States to secure a wealthy wife for his son King Alexander of Serbia.

A RESERVATION from Germany states that government census returns show that in Bulgaria there are 3,883 people who are over 100 years old.

SENATOR HILL and Senator Tillman, both Democrats had a lively debate in the Senate last week.

The Church in Basia has undertaken a tobacco reform. The Bishop has denounced the habit of smoking as a disgusting bad habit.

A RELIGIOUS fanaticism man disguised as a woman, shot the Shah of Persia, while he was worshipping in the inner sanctuary of a church near the city of Teheran, Persia.

THE Millennial Dawn must be a long distance in the future, if a good state of society is the necessary state, for statistics prove that there is a more depravity manifesting itself among the people now than in a number of generations past.

WHEN the Republicans were in power, every month the statement went forth, "the national debt was decreased so much last month."

Now the Democratic administration has to issue the statement, "the national debt was increased so much last month."

SENATOR FLEMING of South Carolina made a fiery speech in the United States Senate last Friday against the policy of the President.

On his neck he wore a small pitchfork breast-pin, and threatened to withdraw the Democratic party of South Carolina from the Democratic camp, if the Democratic National Convention at Chicago declares against silver.

The country will not elect a President from the ranks of a party that has so broken down the business of the country that it costs 5 to 8 million dollars a month more to run the government than the government costs.

To go out on a sick night in the country and catch as many as 15 to 17 year old boys as would be necessary to give the requisite number to the Washington government, and install them in office at Washington, they could not mismanage affairs more than has the Cleveland administration.

The Democratic State Convention at Allentown, that declared for Ex-Governor Pattison for President, declared against the greenback most vehemently in its resolutions.

That is only going back to its action during the days of rebellion. The greenback when first issued had no greater enemy, unless it was Jeff Davis & Co., than the leaders of the Democracy of Pennsylvania and other northern states.

So then when ex-Governor Pattison's Allentown Convention denounces the greenback, it goes back to the argument of the Democracy, during the days of the rebellion.

A Smart Mason.

The Chambersburg News of May 1st says—Mason Conrad Whitman of Hamilton township, laid the brick in a two story building, 28 feet long by 20 feet wide, recently, for Mr. Philip Crist along the Green castle road in Guilford township in the short time of 10 days.

Considering that Mr. Whitman is 63 years old, it was certainly fast work, and he would like to know if any mason of the same age can equal it.

Harrison's Will.

Ex-President Harrison while he was President, made a will leaving his property in equal divisions to his wife who was then living; to his daughter Mrs. McKee, and his son Russell Harrison.

After Mrs. Harrison's death he made another will, dividing the property equally between his son and daughter.

To this he recently added a codicil providing that his shall apply only to the property of which he was possessed at the time of his recent marriage, and that his home in Indianapolis and whatever property he may accumulate from this time on shall go to his widow in case she survives him.

A Swindle.

A neat swindle is being worked with success in many towns. A woman book agent appears in town and goes from house to house leaving books for examination.

Next day a man calls to see if they are wanted, and if they are not he takes them away with him. Usually they are not wanted. A few days later, the woman agent appears again, and on being told that the man has taken away the book, weeps compassionately, her books all over town, pleads poverty and accepts the proffered compensation.

RUNNING SORES CURED.

Last week, Pa. Feb. 19, 1896. A few years ago I had running sores on my limbs for which I tried various medicines without benefit.

After I had taken this medicine for a while the sores healed and I have had no trouble with these since. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all.

to make it unpleasant for him when he appeared on the streets by passing side remarks about him when he passed by.

He took their insults quite while, but last week he drew the meshes of the law or some fit form by making information against them for annoyance.

They were arrested, taken before a justice and each fined one dollar and costs, which they paid rather than go to jail. There have reformed their street manners.

Election of County Superintendent.

The School Directors of Juniata county met in the Court House at Mifflintown on Tuesday, the 5th inst.

The sale of the interest of Francis E. Campbell, minor child of Sarah Ellen Campbell, dec'd, in real estate in Beal township, was confirmed by the Court.

The Sheriff's deeds were acknowledged on Wednesday afternoon at 1 P. M.

Hope Jumping.

Young girls are once more indulging in the practice of rope jumping to an alarming extent. Timid mothers who fully realize the dangers of the foot ball field for their girls, rarely appreciate the peril of the apparently harmless jumping rope for their daughters. And yet the latter has its victims every year, and though

TWO SNAKE STORIES.

TOLD BY A GENTLEMAN WHO IS UP IN CERPTOLOGY.

Snake That Should Not Be Killed—How the Black Snake Hunts and Captures its Food—Rescuing a Ship From a Python Who Had Calmly Taken Possession.

"Sit down and sharpen your pencil, while I overland my mental shavers," remarked Mr. Thompson, curator of the zoological collection in the park, in answer to a request for some snake stories.

"Before giving you some of my experiences I want you to enter a protest against the pernicious practice of our countrymen of killing snakes, such as the black snake, garter snake and the like. Every farmer should protect them, for they are beneficial, instead of being harmful, as is generally supposed by a large majority of humanity. Any material will tell you that the food of the black snake consists largely of rats, mice, etc., while that of the garter snake is principally insects, such as grasshoppers, caterpillars, etc."

"Now for some of my experiences. In my younger days I was crossing Ashby's gap, over the Blue Ridge, Virginia, in company with an uncle of the famous Black Horse Cavalry Ashby. We were making a portage of our baggage over a steep and rocky trail, when our attention was attracted by a snake, which rolled instead of hopped down the side slope. Ashby pulled up the horse and said, 'There's a black snake after that fellow.' An instant after the snake thrust his head through the fence, and on observing us drew back. In the meanwhile the food had gathered himself together, and was hopping at a lively gait up the road. Ashby remarked, 'Now I will show you something,' and sprang out of the buggy and caught the creature, who through a short distance and released. Returning, he turned the buggy and drove back down the road some 50 steps, when we alighted and tied the horse. Climbing over the fence on the opposite side of the road to that on which the snake had made his appearance, we stealthily worked our way up until we came in sight of the point where he was first seen. Lying down in the long grass and peering through the rails, we did not have to wait long before the snake came through the hole in the fence, and he looked about for a few seconds, and then descended the slope down which the road had rolled, and followed his trail up the road. On coming to the spot where it had been picked up, he began to crawl, precisely as if he had been on a log, the snake had gradually increased the size of his circles until he struck the spot where the road had been put down, when he made a bee line after it. We kept close to the road and hurried along, precisely as if we had been as he discovered that he was being followed turned up the slope and squirmed out of sight through the fence. Ashby said, 'I am sure you are satisfied now that a black snake hunts by scent.' "Now I will tell you an out of the South Africa. I lived in Durban, Natal, which is about 1,000 miles around the Cape of Good Hope, I received Madagascan. One morning I received a note from the port captain, asking me to come to the ship, as a python had taken possession of a German brig and I was wanted to capture it. Taking one of my keepers with me, I hurried down, and found quite a crowd on the jetty, among which was the crew of the brig. On my inquiry I learned that the python had been a shower during the night, and in the morning the mate had ordered one of the men to go aloft and shake out the sails, in order to dry them. He started up, and on reaching the mainmast topgallant and came down with a python in his hand, which he had just captured. He was instantly ordered to hauls and numerous other places, while the valiant mate started aloft to attend to matters on his own hook. No sooner did his head get on a level with the top than he came to rest, and the python was coiled about his neck. He instantly raised the alarm, and the entire crew left no time in getting on the rigging and spreading the report that the ship was full of the biggest kind of snakes.

"With the assistance of the port captain's binoculars I had no difficulty in making a critical examination of the entire upper works of the vessel, which was anchored about 100 yards from the shore. The python was in the rigging, and I saw that he had taken possession of the hole for the purpose of fighting me, when he was instantly noosed around the neck and the halyards made fast to the ratlines. In his violent efforts to effect a release he drew back with such force that he threw himself into insensibility. Calling to the keeper to hold the mouth of the sack open, I watched until I thought he was nearly at his last gasp, when I squirmed up on top, loosened his coils around the neck, lowered him to the water, and kept him immediately out of the noose. By the time that I reached the deck he had nearly recovered from his severe wind stoppage. I gently opened the mouth of the sack to have a good look at him and discovered from his blood appearance that he had recently partaken of a hearty meal. On the arrival of the crew on board it was discovered that the python's fox terrier was missing. I therefore concluded that the python, in swimming across the harbor, had grasped the vessel's hawser, upon which he had crawled on to the deck, swallowed the dog and gone aloft to digest his meal."—Buffalo Commercial.

One Way of Catching Fiddler Crabs.

There are various ways of catching fiddler crabs. One way of catching the black or mud fiddler, the one that bores into meadow banks along salt creeks, is with two hooks as placed on a fork a deep sided letter V. The fisherman seeks a spot where there is a little strip of sand at low water, between the base of the mud bank and the water's edge. There comes out of their holes and go down to the edge of the water, often in great numbers. The fisherman comes over the meadow with his boards, which he sets up on edge as quietly as he can on the sand, with the opening of the V toward the water. Then he alarms the crabs, and they come scurrying up the little beach in multitudes, bound for their holes. As they come they carry their big claw aloft, somewhat as the soldier carries his gun. It is from this habit that the fiddler crab gets the name of soldier crab, by which it is also known. Those crabs that are opposed to the opening in the V, but when they strike the board sides they are thrown more and more together, until they converge in a mass at the point. The fisherman, sitting outside, takes them out by the handful.—New York Sun.
