Merchant Wannamaker at the great fire in Philadelphia last week, manifested great efficiency at extinguishing the fire as he has manifested in every department of life that he has been placed in, and the smoke of the ruins had scarcely gone till his store was again open for all who were seeking good goods at prices profitable to the buyer. Mr. Wannamaker is an extraordinary man to him any way you will in the higher and best walks of life.

Windows were shattered in the houses of Charles Vovineck, Frank Glessner, Mrs. Gertrude Christy, S. S. Barr, Miss Elizabeth Stiffer, B. Goldman, J. R. Humes, E. Melvin & Co., John T. Leet.

The Republican ticket nominated by a popular vote for the February election and the Democratic ticket nominated by a Democratic caucus for Fernmanagh township, did not satisfy all the citizens in the township, and a number thought they could best further their desires and interests of friends by putting another ticket in the field by nomination papers, which they did on Saturday, January 30, 1897. The citizens who signed and filed the nomination papers ticket are: Samuel Warner, B. Heller, John Ballentine, W. W. H. Longene, James Longene, G. M. Diffenderfer, E. J. Warner. The ticket they nominated is: For judge of election, Geo. W. Horning; inspector, Charles Dunn; school directors, J. C. Hower, David Wolfgang; road supervisors, Wm. B. Luvver, H. C. The funeral of George B. Roberts of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, took place on Tuesday afternoon, February 2, 1897. Interment in the West Laurel Hill Cemetery at Philadelphia, and thus passed away Mr. Roberts, President of one of the greatest transportation lines in the world. He was a man of great executive ability and imagination. It is the difference, excepting in form, between such a man and the man who cannot manage or control himself, but now dust to dust just as the incapable paper dust to dust, and we are all alike so we are told, but who ever explained the phenomena of the moral, business and intellectual differences of men here, and who can explain the greater mystery of their being made equal in the world to come. The man who can explain that, can explain the phenomena of life and death, and that man has not yet been born. The funeral of Mr. Roberts was attended by people from every pursuit in life.

The main Capital Building erected in 1810 at Harrisburg, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday in the middle of the day. It was a brick building, 180 feet by 80, two stories high, built in what architects are pleased to call the Elizabethan style of architecture. It is believed the fire was started by an improperly protected electric wire that furnished light for the Lieutenant Governor's department above the Senate chamber and for the Public School department just across the hall from the Lieutenant Governor's room. But as far as positive information goes it is not known just when and where the fire started for the first information that the occupants of the building had of fire was a small that diffused itself through corridors upstairs in the departments mentioned. Some of the Senators' small fire as early as 10 o'clock in the forenoon. Search up stairs was not begun for the cause of the fire until about noon and when a wash-bill in the Lieutenant Governor's room was pried off fire showed itself. It was quickly repressed but the fire was raging between the walls, between floor and ceiling over a considerable portion of the upstairs of that part of the building. The School Department had the hose in that part of the building soon in play, but their efforts coming at such a late hour after the start of the fire were of no more consequence than if they had been squirting water from a tea kettle. However, their work showed their good intention toward the protection of public property. The Senate was not in session. The progress of the fire in the Senate wing of the building was rapid. Fire appeared everywhere and few Senators were able to get their personal effects out of their desks. While the fire was going on in that side of the building, the House was in session in the other side and had so nearly finished the days work that only two bills remained unfinished on the calendar. Speaker Boyer had by some means been made acquainted with what was going on in the Senate side of the building, but to prevent a panic among the members remained calm and unconcerned and quietly had the doors leading to the rotunda barricaded and by the time the House was awakening to the fact of the situation a motion to adjourn had been made and carried and the members escaped by the back door. When the law-makers of the House got out they were amazed, almost dumb-founded to see thousands of people collected at the other side of the building and thousands more coming running. A great blazing fire was cracking and devouring the very pinnacle of the dome and a great column of smoke as black as night was rolling away in an inexhaustible column before a brisk breeze from the east. Just then the dome came down with a mighty crash into the rotunda and a great puff came out from under the tin roof as if some mighty giant was struggling to get out and thousands of tongues of fire darted throughout the House Chamber where the members sat only a few minutes before. The fire department of the City had been summoned and when they arrived a half hour after the discovery of the fire they were to late. The water pressure was lacking and so amidst it all little was left of the place except the imperishable walls. Many valuable records were destroyed. The building was insured for two hundred thousand dollars. The Legislature was convened in other public buildings on Wednesday, but much of the business that had been done before it has to be begun anew.

A Rich Harvest.

It costs no more to sow good seeds than it does to sow old and worthless stock. How foolish is the person who fails to get the best to start with. No doubt you have often thought of this, when your garden has not done very well.

Will you jog along in the same old way this year, or use a little forethought and send to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for their Catalogue which contains a list of all that's new and good?

Their seeds are always reliable—sure to grow and never disappoint. Send 10 cents for Catalogue and deduct this amount from first order. Really costs nothing.
