Chow dog, in the way or can diet, is so great a delicacy that to leave it out of an official dinner in China would be as great a crime as leaving out whitebait or asparagus in May on similar occasions in this country. At Canten rows of dogs, skinned, dressed and ready for cooking, are hung up in lines on the stalls in the market place. The poor chow, when thus he contributes to the delicacies of the heathen Chince's table, must not have cutgrown the tender stage of puppydom. When he is 2 two pounds, he is at his best, and ence he has managed to escape his doom till he is 6 months old he has a chance of living to a patriarchal age, for after that time his "flavor" is not, from the epicurean point of view, what it ought From the non-Celestial point of view the chow pup is far too amusing and handsome a little customer to be sacrificed on the same altar on which are laid shark fins, duck tongues and swallow nests. The baby chow in appearance is like a tiny bear cub. The lower 10,-000 of China—or rather the lower 10,-000,000-who cannot afford a dinner of chow, philosophically eat rats instead, deeming them a very passable and pal-atable substitute for the coveted puppy dog. —San Francisco Call.
