WALRUS. March 19th, 1897. Mr. Edron—Dear Sir; I would like to announce through your paper, that I have been informed that a cowardly personal charge had been gotten up by some hungry politicians and used extensively against me as a candidate for supervisor. That I wanted the office, for the purpose of building a road across the ridge, and impose a debt on the township of five or six hundred dollars, of which I knew nothing until after the election. It was a fabulous report, and utterly false. I was not raised that way. I was neither raised to extravagance or fraud, and if I had that road to make it would not have cost the township one tenth that amount, as that road has been laid out about ten years and to my certain knowledge has not cost the township over ten or fifteen dollars. So I don't think we have been extravagant, and I did not want the office for any such purpose, for I think we have taken enough, and still we have the experience of bad roads, and will expect equal justice to our roads, for it seems to me as though it must have looked like a big contract to that faction, for I would have to be as hungry as a church mouse before I would use any such means to get office, and it was only by request of a number of my friends that I agreed to be a candidate, as they claimed it was our turn on this side of the township. But it was much like the license question in this township, we got no license, but we got the experience all the same.

Eaten By Men and Women. Victoria, B. C., April 8.—Advice from Australia state that a white trader named Duncan, who went to Sydney from South Africa, met a terrible death at the hands of the New Hebrides. At the savages had decided to take his life he was tied up to a tree for three days, being kept alive and forcibly stuffed with food. He was then cut down, killed and eaten, women even joining joyfully in the cannibalistic feast. The body was a great assemblage from the various groups of islands.

Duncan was a single man, about 33 years old. The New Hebrides natives are very treacherous, and on several occasions have dealt murderously with European visitors.
