George Albright of Altoona was arrested on Saturday for frightening his wife to death. His wife had given birth to a son. The father got drunk over the event and whipped his mother-in-law and threatened to kill his wife and new born son, which so frightened Mrs. Albright that she took fits and died. The coroner's inquest pronounced it a case of murder.
The farmers were never busier, hay, corn and wheat, all claim their attention from early morn till to dewy eve, but in five months it will all have been finished, and they can sit behind the stove and toast their shins, attend stock and sleigh and ride to break the monotony of winter life. To the man who is physically strong and has a contented mind, there is no life so satisfactory as that of the farmer.

HOWARD TAYLOR, Aug. 27, '97. West Chester, Pa.
If you employ an unnaturalized foreigner over 21 years of age, you are held liable for his tax of three cents a day. This is by a late act of the present Legislature. Of this law among other things, the Philadelphia Times says:—
It is entirely proper that the proceeds of this tax should go into the treasury of the county in which it is collected. A number of counties in the State have been compelled to suffer oppressive burdens in maintaining schools for their children of unnaturalized residents and the costs of the criminal courts have been doubled or quadrupled by the lawless foreign element, while increased costs have also been put upon the county to sustain their almshouses and prisons by this alien element that is prone to lawlessness. Even with this tax imposed of the counties with the pay of the local government will not be compensated for the additional expense put upon them by the class that must pay this tax.

A scientific man speaking of the working ability of bees says—Two sexton bees will busy a mole in an hour, a feat equivalent to two men interrupting a whale in the same length of time.
The French government has sent an agent into the horse raising districts of the United States to buy horses. It is time to again take to raising horses. About the time colts are ready to be broken in three years hence horses will bring a better price than now.

Philip Strouse, a prominent citizen living near Mexico this county, brought before Squire J. Frank Patterson on Friday, on the information of C. N. Kniesly, for selling intoxicating liquor without license. Mr. Strouse gave bail in the sum of five hundred dollars to answer in court. The report is that it was either oil or vinegar that Strouse sold.
The fence around the Court House yard has been painted black, and a number of yellow bands have been painted across the side gates in the latest approved artistic style. The purpose of the yellow bands is understood to be ornamental, but some unwashed, unrepentant man declared that the bands were painted on the gate to give persons heavily loaded with booze a fair chance to see the way in when on the road to the Court House to transact business.
According to a telegram from Burlington, New Jersey, there is what among the Presbyterians of that town, because the management of the church says there shall be no more kissing plays engaged in at Sunday School picnics. Kissing was one of the luxuries that was indulged in at Sunday School picnics at Burlington, and it is reported that kind of fun all of a sudden has created a profound sensation. The officers of the Sunday School say they have determined to stop the kissing, because dangerous microbes are in that way passed around among the people. The movement against kissing seems more on account of health than for other reasons. There are, however, others, who desire to prohibit kissing at Sunday School picnics on account of the immoral aspect of the case.
Snake stories, fish stories and lightning stories, are all big this year, but as a rule they are not carry compensation with them. But as there are exceptions to all things so there must needs be compensation in the lightning's bolt sometimes, just for the exceptions sake, and such a case is reported from South Bend, Indiana, where a bolt of lightning struck the residence of George Moon, tearing off all of the siding, scattering the wall plaster in strips over the floor and knocking the legs off a bedstead. It narrowly missed three women who were sitting in one of the rooms, and then played around several milk cans, turning the contents to butter. When the lightning left the house it tore a large hole in the ground nearby, uncovering a large iron box full of gold and silver coins and other articles. Many of the coins are of Spanish make, over two hundred years old, and are valuable.
A bloody tragedy was enacted in the Methodist Episcopal church in Pleasant Valley, Texas, on June 27, in which two men were instantly killed, and a third so seriously wounded that he cannot live. Augustus Garrison and Frank Jones and brother Thos. Jones, lived neighbors, and were well to do people and church members. Garrison was a man of family, the Jones men were unmarried. Frank Jones under the promise of marriage was too familiar with Garrison's daughter. Last Sunday just as the preacher had taken his text, Garrison arose and walked to the door. The next instant the congregation were startled by the rapid firing of pistols, and when the congregation hastened out of the building, it was to find Garrison and Frank Jones dead, each shot through the heart and Thomas Jones, dying. He was able to say that "he and his brother were about to enter the church when Garrison met them and drew a pistol. They drew pistols and the awful tragedy was enacted almost as quickly as commenced.
The North American of Monday, June 28, says—Mrs. Clara Hartman last night was relieved of a snake that had been in her stomach three days. She states the time it took up its habitation in her when she took glass of water one night at a pump three years ago. At that time she felt something slippery go down her throat.
Soon she developed an abnormal appetite, but outside of this she suffered no ill-effects from the reptile. She tried all manner of remedies to relieve herself of the unwelcome visitor, but to no avail.
She noticed that when she ate candy or had anything sweet in her mouth, the snake came up in her throat.
Last night she put some brown sugar into her mouth, and the snake came up far enough for her to shut off its escape by clasping herself hard by the throat and reaching her fingers into her mouth. The snake was eight inches long and white. Mrs. Hartman has been sick since the exit of the snake.
Boyd Bratton, aged about 22 years, hung himself to the limb of a tree in Groninger's woods north west of Patterson, Pa., at his home on the 21st of June. The weather was warm, and he walked out lightly attired in shirt sleeves and pants. Not returning in the evening his relatives naturally became uneasy concerning him. On Tuesday and Wednesday diligent inquiry was made for him. Some one had seen him under an apple tree on the Park farm south of Patterson, and that led to the conjecture that he had been drowned in the river. The river along the rock below town was high, and dynamite was exploded in the hope of bringing his body to the surface. That search was made on Wednesday and was fruitless. On Thursday morning a large company of men went to the ridge north-west of Patterson and searched the woods. Their search was rewarded by finding the unfortunate youth, hanging to the limb of a tree, dead. From appearance, he had hung himself on Monday. The rash act was committed not far from where the water company are constructing their reservoir. His insanity was not of the vicious kind. He never manifested criminal purposes as many demoted persons do. With him it took a religious turn, and his desire was to lead a mild and gentle life with Christ as his model. He was constantly making inquiry as to the way to eternal life, and amidst the perplexity and doubt that surrounded him, he lost his balance and took his own life. It was a shock to the community as all such cases are. His friends have the sympathy of the community.

Julius Jacoby an efficient attaché in Merchant Schott's stores, is a bicyclist, whose habit has been to ride early in the morning to sharpen his appetite and brighten his business point for the day's work, so sharp, that a down east Yankee would fall in driving a keener bargain than he. He usually rode out of town before the sluggards and those who need a long nap in the morning have risen from their virtuous couches. Five o'clock often found him away beyond sight and sound of town, wheeling along at the rate of a rapidly running locomotive. The best of riders may be unmoored or unweeled and for the time being be laid up for repairs. The truth is there must be a certain amount of riders and wheels tumbling about and be hurt and broken, and so it appears that the fates selected Julius for one of their victims last Saturday morning. On that morning he rode east of the town and was in fine spirits ready for store work when he should return, but in the twinkling of an eye, quicker than the eye can see and quicker than the nerves of pain can respond, he became unconscious and as dead to all the things around him as if he had never been born. When he awoke he found himself lying on his back, and saw a man lie in the road as if dead. He did not ride by, but like the good Samaritan went straight to the prostrate man and raised him to a sitting posture. Jacoby "soon came to," but he could not explain how or what had happened. All he could tell was that he had started to ride down the hill mentioned, and when he felt that he was going as if on wings, he attempted to alight the sp of the bicycle, and "the next thing he knew, he knew nothing." He couldn't tell Hile what had happened. Hile remained with him and helped him to remount his wheel, and then accompanied him to town. Dr. Crawford was called and put several stitches in to hold the skin together around Jacoby's left eye. He was bruised in other parts of the body, but was not seriously hurt. In a day or two he was again ready to sell store goods with as much vim as ever.
