The Emperor and Empress withdrew during the intermission. Many humbler mortals followed their example: among them Count Ivanoff, apparently in nowise disturbed by the fact that the "gilded youth" in the stalls were bringing a small battery of opera-glasses to bear upon the dazzling charms of his beautiful wife. The Count had been gone but a few minutes when there was a gentle knock at the door, and, in answer to the Countess' "Enter," the usher appeared, and said, deferentially:

"Pardon, Mme. la Comtasse; a gentleman charged with a message from Her Majesty the Empress waits in the corridor, and desires to know if madame will have the goodness to receive him." "Certainly, Enter, I beg of you,

The Empress begs that you will intrust one of your pendants to her core for a few moments, as the only satisfactory method of disposing of the vexed question. I will myself return it the instant Her Majesty gives it back into my keeping.'

"With the greatest pleasure," agreed the Countess, detaching the precious jewel forthwith, and depositing it, without misgiving, in the outstretched paim of the Imperial messenger. The Countess bestowed a smile and gracious bow of dismissal upon Her Majesty's distinguished ambassador.

'Impossible!" cried the Countess in her turn. "The affair is absolutely as I tell you. It was the veritable M. Dumont who came into this box and took away by diamond. Only wait a little, and he will bring it back intact."

"To wait a little is to lessen the chance of its recovery. I will go and inquire of Dumont, if I can get at him, whether he has been seized with a sud-

Recently C. W. Mendenhall and Frank Hamman, while removing straw from an icehouse preparatory to again filling it with ice, found on the bottom of the building beneath the ice a layer of snakes nearly a foot in depth. The snakes were colled together in a solid mass, and on being disturbed began squirming and hissing in a truly frightful manner. They emitted a nauseous odor. The snakes were from a foot to six feet in length, and large around in proportion. The reptiles were animated by being exposed to the air, and one of the large fellows with a quick move.

The hulawalla is used by the tribesmen to warn off the women during the week of the sacred bora dance. It can be heard three or four miles away, according to the wind and lay of the country. During that week the women must not come in hearing of the dread instrument or they suffer dire agony to a sure death.

Pretty soon they lost their way. They had with them a little instrument called a compass, which would have shown them the way, only it was so dark they could not see which way the needle pointed. They did not dare carry a light for fear the enemy would see it and follow them. Just then one of the men noticed a little glow-worm shining in the grass. He picked it up and put it on the compass, and there was just light enough to show which way the needle pointed. Then the men knew which way their home was. They were very glad, and went on until they
