THE republican primary election in Lancaster county and in Butler county and in Montour county, were all won by the Quay people. The great principle at stake in the his Bridge street soliloquy, pill primary elections this spring among boxes, quinine, sedatives, sudorithe republicans is majority rule, it is the principle upon which all American institutions are based. and as Senator Quay stands as the representative of majority rule it is not to be wondered that he wins in every county. The insurgents got down on the wrong side of the fence to fight when they took up the the battle for minority or bolters rule. It isn't American doctrine to espouse minority rule. Majorities sometimes are not right, but that does not effect the principle. The wrongs of majorities may be corrected. Senator Quay's stronghold with the people, has ever been that he has never faltered in his adherence to first primary principles of republicanism and the general principle of majority rule.
