One of the candidates under the law for the Supreme Bench must be a democrat. His election is assured, and that is the reason the Democratic State Convention this Wednesday at Harrisburg is such an earnest convention. The man who gets the nomination gets a seat on the Bench of the Supreme Court.
The democratic State Convention in session this Wednesday at Harrisburg. The plan their politicians are after is the nomination for Supreme Court Judge. A nomination for that office means an election for under the laws they are entitled to a representative on the Supreme Bench. It is a mighty hungry convention.

There was a hard battle on Saturday some distance beyond Maud. The enemy as usual were routed. Several thousand American troops took part in the engagement. The administration doubtless understands the situation, but it is suggested that the Federal army could be more effective in putting down the Filipinos if the army were increased to 200,000 men in present force.

Several counties in Minnesota and Wisconsin were visited last Monday by a storm of wind and rain that exceeded anything in the experience in the lives of white people there. The rain was not in drops. It was a water fall flooding highland and deluging lowlands and lands. The loss of life is reported at about two hundred people, and the destruction of property correspondingly great.
That the men who run the prize fights arrange all things before the fight, is proven by the following statement of prize fighter James Corbett, in the declaration that he pursed "for his prize fight with Mr. Sharkey was divided before the men entered the ring. "Before the fight," he says, "I got $16,000 and placed it in a safe in my house at Harrisburg. I don't know what Sharkey got. It's none of my business. I had my money and then the only thing I had to look after was my reputation." Mr. Corbett asserts that this division of the purse before the fight is the usual thing.

Last Saturday a young blooded horse owned by electric light plant owner Troxel cut the pigeon wing to perfection. Mr. Troxel was driving the animal parallel with the railroad. An engine came, and to the nag it seemed as if he must go into it head foremost. The beast was not adequate to the task and wheeled. Mr. Troxel slipped out of the cart behind. When the animal came round on the wheel the cart struck a telephone pole with such force that the trotter was relieved of both harness and cart. Spectators say that for an instant it looked as if both cart and harness would not stop their upward go till they had reached and hung themselves on the telephone wire, but they did not get up quite that high and came down as fast as they went up. The horse ran into an out field south of the big mill, and there serenely began to pasture. Mr. Troxel soon had the animal in a new outfit and drove around as if nothing had happened. The beast seemed to take the matter as if a part of the day's programme.
Some days ago a bolt of lightning came down in the vicinity of Court House square. No one however knew exactly where. Postmaster Andrew Allison was standing in the post office door. His sight of it was so general that he could not locate its descent. He also felt the heat of it and is satisfied with his experience with a bolt that escaped from the clouds to earth. A spark of the bolt as big as a man's head darted into the kitchen door of the National Hotel and went to pieces on the floor. Another spark as big as a foot ball tumbled around on the kitchen floor of Professor Gortner's house and a ball of it disported it self in Mr. Robert McMeen's kitchen as if to hangering the coming of a new element for speedy cooking. Sheriff Stoner was stunned in the jail and members of his family felt the effects and for a time people thought the court house had been struck. But as all efforts to find traces of the stroke failed the event had passed as a back number stored away in the storehouse of memory, when lo, someone discovered loose slate on the roof of the Presbyterian church. An investigation followed and then the fact of the whereabouts of the object of the lightning's stroke was revealed. The bolt came down on the church roof eight or ten feet from the north-west corner of the tower. The slate was broken and part of the bolt went through the roof and must have passed to the ground between the plastering and the wall as there are no marks on the inside of the building. A part of the bolt passed along the west side of the tower close to the roof where it joins the tower and melted and tore the tin that was placed there to keep the rain from getting down by the side of the tower. There is a lightning rod on the tower, but as far as appearances go the fluid did not touch the rod. A brick had also dropped from the extreme upper north-west corner of the upper window on the west side of the tower. A brick in the same place in a window in the south side of the building is also loose and may drop out at any time. If the bricks were loosened by the lightning it must have held a high capacitor around the tower. Perhaps the big spark that entered the National Hotel, and the equally big spark that danced around Professor Gortner's and Mr. McMeen's kitchens were knocked off while the lightning was playing around the tower. J. Harry Strayer is repairing the damage to the roof.

An observing man says the time to gather worms for fishing is at night. Take a lantern, go in a grass field. There you can find worms on top of the ground among the grass. For some reason the worms come out of the ground at night.
A Pottstown, Pa. man hung himself in his barn last Thursday on a ladder. The singular thing about both, was the deep religious devotion the murderers manifested on the scaffold, and the animal appetite to eat at the last moment. The one said he wanted to go home to Jesus, and the other said he hoped to meet his friends in heaven. No one has ever returned to tell what kind of a home heaven is, but there must be a good deal of bad company there if all the murderers go there as they claim to do when they are hung. Might it not be for the betterment of society in this world, if murderers were not so taught; would it not be for the betterment of the depraved to teach them that it is a matter with them and their maker, and that they will be held responsible for their depravity. It seems like a piece of presumption to teach a man who has filled the measure of his iniquity and that he is no longer a fit man to live in this world, but that he must be sent out of this world to stop his career of crime, but that his execution will send him to heaven and Jesus. It is a serious question whether men are teaching the correct thing, when they teach murderers that they are fitted by a simple act of belief to go to heaven.

George W. Wagenseller's printing office at Middleburg, Snyder county, was broken into one night last week. His safe was carried to a field and blown open. Papers, railroad passes and promissory notes amounting to $185 were carried away. The thieves might have done better than to ransack an editor's safe for money. The passes if they attempt to use them will lead to their detection, and the notes of delinquent subscribers will be an indication of their own shortcomings.
Some people want to bring legal action against faith healers. They say the faith healer does great harm among certain people when they take ill. They make the sick people believe that by taking medicine their lives are endangered. The medicine doctors want to get rid of the faith healers, and they are afraid if they don't take medicine they certainly must die. Amidst all the certainty appears that the faith doctor has no more faith in the medicine doctor than the medicine doctor has in the faith doctor.

There was a wreck of a number of cars in a freight train at the head of the railroad yard at this place last Friday evening. Some one made a mistake, and thereby a freight train ran into the rear end of a freight train ahead. It was about 6 o'clock in the evening. The weather was fine and that induced many people of both sexes to gather at the wreck. It is not often that a railroad wreck clearing crew have among their spectators several hundred women to put them on their best behavior. Supervisor Krick and his efficient assistant Massey were on the ground. There was not an oath or profane word uttered by anyone, and the work went on like clock machinery. The men spectators almost envied the wreck cleaners because the workmen were getting paid for being there and the others were only idle lookers on. Most of the women had arranged themselves in groups on the grassy slope of ground that rises 50 to 100 feet on the west side of the road at that place. From that elevated ground they could look down as from the seats in a circus at the animated scene on the railroad. John Kelly had a telegraph stand close by the track and that kept Supervisor Krick in electric touch from that place to higher authority. The cabin that was on the rear end of the train that was run into made a first rate buffer to break the force of the run in, but it was hard on the cabin. It was smashed like an egg-shell and lifted and thrown forward on a large open car full of coke. The coke car was broken with three other cars ahead, all loaded with coke. Cars, coke, and all broken material was speedily rolled off the road on the west side and travel and transportation restored on the track that had been obstructed. Here and there in the crowd of spectators were past masters in railroad work. Mr. Frederick Esponsechade was of the number and he was retrospective in his conversation. "There," he said, "is a locomotive numbered 1532. When I first found service with the railroad company away back in the fifties, the engines were known by names. The thing has grown so large that they can't find enough names to go around, and they must take to figures. Three out of four of the large cars now on the road make a train when I was a railroader. That was away back in the days of a single track. I was a machinist and worked in the machine shop, but on wreck days they made all rounders of us all. We were all called out to help clear wreck. Look in here at the inside of the old machine shop. Here at this second window I worked. At the first window Jim Parker, deceased worked. Just behind me Wm. Jackson, late deceased of Altoona, worked. One day a peculiar sound behind me caused me to look back. Such a sight, Jackson's necktie had caught on a shaft and he was being choked. I yelled to Parker and then ran and threw off the belt. Parker pulled out his knife, forced the blade between Jackson's neck and the tie and cut the tie. Jackson fell to the floor and we thought he was dead, but he soon came too and was not much the worse over it, but it was a close call. Railroaders are always within the ring of close calls. "Well there is Sam Stimpling, still running the engine. Stimpling has been here since 1858, forty-one years. What will this railroad be forty-one years after this. Who? and what will be here on the evening of June 9, 1940."

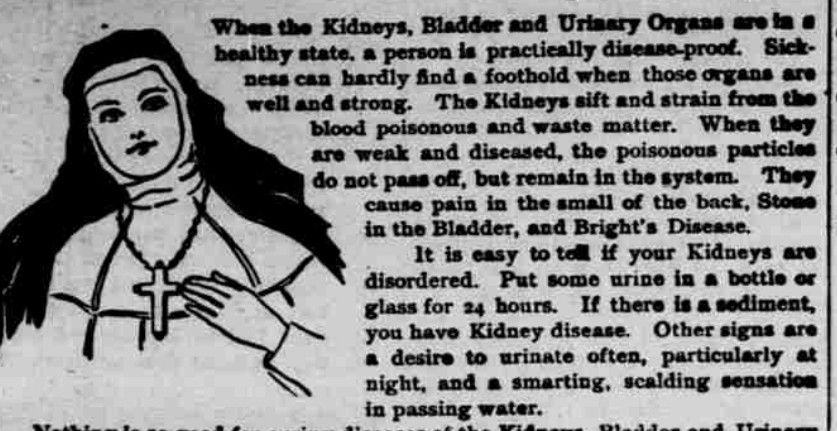

There were two executions in Pennsylvania last week. One in Chester county, the other in Lancaster county. The singular thing about both, was the deep religious devotion the murderers manifested on the scaffold, and the animal appetite to eat at the last moment. The one said he wanted to go home to Jesus, and the other said he hoped to meet his friends in heaven. Health for Everybody!

When the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs are in a healthy state, a person is practically disease-proof. Sickness can hardly find a foothold when those organs are well and strong. The Kidneys sift and strain from the blood poisonous and waste matter. When they are weak and diseased, the poisonous particles do not pass off, but remain in the system. They cause pain in the small of the back, Stomach in the Bladder, and Bright's Disease. It is easy to tell if your Kidneys are disordered. Put some urine in a bottle or glass for 24 hours. If there is a sediment, you have Kidney disease. Other signs are a desire to urinate often, particularly at night, and a smarting, scalding sensation in passing water.

Nothing is so good for curing diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder and Urinary Organs as Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, which has been before the public for over 30 years. It should be taken without delay by men and women who have any of the above symptoms, as the disease is apt to prove fatal if not attended to.

From the Convention of the Good Shepherd, Troy, N. Y., comes this short but pointed endorsement, signed by the sisters of that famed and pious institution:
"We have used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for Kidney trouble, and have found it very efficacious."
Sample Bottle Free!
If you wish to test Favorite Remedy before buying it, send your full postoffice address to the Dr. DAVID KENNEDY CORPORATION, Rondout, N. Y., and mention this paper. You will then receive a sample bottle, free, and circulars giving full directions for its use. You can depend upon the genuineness of this offer, and all sufferers should take advantage of it at once. The regular size is sold by all druggists for $1.00 a bottle, and it is well worth the price.
