"Hold on!" remarked the furniture man W. F. Snyder, "you'll have to give your age before you can prove that, for I was one of the youngest soldiers in the army." "All right!" continued McCahan, "I was born on the 16th day of November 1815." "Hello!" ejaculated Snyder, "That's my birthday and birth year." "Both were born on the same day and same year, but neither could tell the hour of the day when they came into this world."

Elmer Kepner's home in Turbett township was the scene of a pleasant event last Saturday evening. A company of neighbors assembled to celebrate the anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Kepner. The company was large and congenial. Mr. Kepner presented Mrs. Kepner with a gold watch. An orchestra accompanied the party and the strains of the music was wafted across hill and valley and was heard on the mountain side in the tents of the camping-meeting people. The time went swiftly by and just when the clock struck 12 on Sunday morning, the company left with the cheerful good morning greeting for all, and especially for Mr. and Mrs. Kepner.

Last Sunday was a grand summer day. The rain of the previous evening had cleared the atmosphere and prepared the way for a turn out of the people in great numbers at the Evangelical camping-meeting at Tuscarora Station. The number of people there was not counted. Thousands were there. There were not seats enough for the twentieth part of the multitude that stood around and about, and walked around and around the square of twenty nice white tents with board floors and ample covering to keep out the heaviest fall of rain. The services were interesting throughout and the order was good. Barring the presence here and there on the outskirts of the camp of a tough or two from no one knows where, every feature of the camp was in first rate order.

John E. McCrum died in the tent of his son-in-law Wm. F. Burchfield at 7 o'clock p. m., on Tuesday evening at the Evangelical Camp-meeting at Tuscarora station. He had arrived there about 4 p. m. from his home in Milford township. He was in good health. He was sitting on a chair. A shuffe of his feet caused one of his family to look at him. His body was leaned back in the chair. He gave three heavy breaths. The family ran to him. He was dead. Undertaker Snyder drove him to the camp at midnight, brought his remains, prepared them for funeral service. Interment will take place on Thursday afternoon in the Mifflintown cemetery. Mr. McCrum was 68 years of age; a highly respected member of one of the oldest families in Juniata Co. He was a member of the Presbyterian church. His wife was Miss H. J. Robinson, who with four children survive him.

"HUMAN HEARTS" OPENS OPERA HOUSE.

When "Human Hearts" last season bade our people good night the management was offered any time and terms wanted to come again in 1899. At that time the real owner and manager, W. E. Nankoville of Patterson, was in litigation with several parasites who claimed an interest and could not make any definite plans so far ahead, but last May the suit was ended, and in addition to securing all rights and title to this gold mine of success Manager Nankoville was awarded five thousand dollars damages against the would be claimants. As New York City has been each season the opening point of the season to arrange dates for four other cities clamoring for the play early, Manager Nankoville has arranged to open one week earlier than usual, therefore Lewistown, on August 19th, next Saturday, is to have the honor of launching one of the great New York successes on its season's career, as the company will open the season here on that evening.—Lewistown Gazette.
