Philadelphia, Oct. 5.-Farmers and the country people generally are beginning to appreciate the magnitude and interesting character of the exhibits of vehicles and farming implements at the National Export Expo-

The greatest county fair in the United States is but a small exhibition in its display of things of utility and comfort of the farmer compared with the comprehensive show made in the implement building at the exposition. It is the best part of a national agricultural fair. It is alluring, and the rural visitor finds more profit and as much amusement in inspecting it as in any other feature of exposition en-

In the agricultural departments the novel and useful appliances which have been gathered form a never ceasing source of interest. Naturally those who make farming their pursuit find instructive information here. At all times of the day, and especially on cursions from other towns, large crowds wend their way among the fine displays which show the improvements that have been made within recent years in the agricultural implement line.

"I do not want to belittle the importance of making pleasure one of the main objects while at the exposition," said a prosperous looking individual, who, with his family, was seen to pay especial attention to a new kind of plow the other day, "but I consider this investigation part of my pleasure and that of my family. "Jealouz, you ask Zertainly, ze animals are jealouz, just like men and women are jealouz," with a smile such as the women of France know how to produce. Continuing, Madame Morreli told her listeners that jealousy was a pronounced trait among lions and tigers, and that the mischief which befalls trainers now and then is frequently caused by the "green eyed monster" in the animal soul. So, after letting the jeal ous tiger wait a while, she removed her hand from the other fellow and gave the disgruntled animal a taste of her

Philadelphia, Oct. - The foreign delegates to the International Commercial Congress, which meets here on the 12th, are arriving in great numbers and lend a picturesque appear ance to the streets of the city. Ther are more foreigners and more varie ties of foreigners in Philadelphia than have been seen here since the days of the Centennial. Among them are swarthy skinned men from India, fair haired representatives of the Scandinavian countries, slant eyed Japan ese and olive skinned Chinamen, broad shouldered, brusque Englishmen and who jostle each other everywhere. In their inspection of the exhibits at the exposition they are the most curious and persistent in their inquirles of all of those who patronize the great show.
