WHEN WE GET RICH.

A, dearest, what a joy to build alaces so fair; ms like dreams of opulence, el the hours of care.

When Shakspeare wrote those in

"Who steals my purse steals trash," He recked not of the things we'll do en we obtain the cash.

No vain and idle fancy ours, To while away the time; But land and sea shall then unfold Their mysteries sublime.

How we will girt this glorious earth, And bask 'neath foreign skies; What mountain fastnesses we'll sweep With our enraptured eyes.

The scenes in song and story told By favored travelers, Will find in us the praise of true And ardent worshipers.

We'll read the riddle of the Sphinx, And scale the pyramids; Seek out old King's sarcophagi And peep beneath the lids.

"I have been troubled a great deal with a torpid liver, which produces constipa-tion. I found CASCARETS to be all you claim for them, and secured such relief the first trial, that I purchased another supply and was com-pletely cured. I shall only be too glad to ree-ommend Cascarets whenever the opportunity is presented." J.A. SMITH. 2020 Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, Pa tiny portrait of a woman, the smallest and most perfect miniature any of the admiring group had ever seen. The face was strangely sweet and pensive; it was that of a woman apparently about 25 years old, and the arrange ment of the hair, as well as what could be seen of the dress, indicated a period somewhere in the forties. On the edge of the setting were some curious angular marks, but whether they were intended for a name or a date nobody could determine. "I first thought the picture was a daguerreotype," said the owner of the ring, "but closer inspection showed that it was painted, either
