

PARTS OF THE BODY. MODELS THAT ARE USED IN THE STUDY OF ANATOMY.

They Are Taken From Subjects In the Morgues and Hospitals of Paris and Are Colored Exactly to Represent Nature.

In the window of an oculist up town is a display which is grossly fascinating. It is composed of paper mache representations of parts and organs of the human body, colored similar to nature. Some are life size, such as a pair of lungs and a stomach, but others, an eye and an ear for instance, are large enough to have belonged to the giant who was knocked out by Jack. A weird model of a head demonstrates unpleasantly how you would look if your skin were peeled off your face. Every vein and nerve and muscle is carefully outlined and colored. A figure displaying the entire interior of a torso, colored to represent nature, shows us that all sorts of things go on inside. One is apt to think of oneself as being one harmonious being interiorly, but this is all wrong, it appears.

Studying these figures sets one wondering where they come from and who models them. It would be an occupation congenial to few, one would suppose. A gentleman who came to the store to buy a pair of shoes, was asked a lot of questions asked by an inquisitive person.

"These models," said he, "are all made in Germany and France. There are none made in this country. Yes, the manufacturers' assistants make their originals in clay, working directly from subjects obtained in hospitals and morgues. Azou of Paris is the largest manufacturer of this line of goods. They make models of sections of animals also. For instance, we now have an order for a deer. Come inside and let me show you more of the things." A glass case in the rear of the store was filled with all sorts of parts of all sorts of animals, human and otherwise.

"Isn't this a beautiful heart?" he was enthusiastically exhibiting a life size organ of paper mache, divided up into little lined parts and colored red and tan and pink and blue.

"It sells for $2. A little throat, similarly colored and divided, would cost you $8 if your fancy ran to that kind of bric-a-brac. A beautiful little bit of mechanism composed of paper mache, bone and wire, illustrating the nerves connecting the tongue with the ear, and various intricate arrangements you can buy for $25.

There was a shelf full of brains and another full of animals' legs and stomachs and livers and things. Altogether it was a most thoroughly looking kind of show on account of the quantities of red paint used to illustrate large sections of muscle. Then standing up in one corner was a life size figure of a man composed of innumerable separate pieces, each one of which had been taken off and individually studied. One side demonstrated the muscle formation and the other the veins and nerves and arteries. This figure can be bought for $500 by any one who wishes such a thing.

Then there were genuine skulls and skeletons. The French excel also in the preparation of human bones for the market. An articulated skull of American workmanship would cost $20. A skull of French articulation was priced at $25, and the work was admirable. All the most delicate little bones were carefully preserved and arranged, and it was subdivided into many small parts, held together with tiny brass hinges. The top of the skull was sawed evenly off, so as to form a sort of cap, but the other openings seemed irregular and dovetailed. This was explained thus:

"Do you know how they separate a skull into its various parts? Well, they pack it full of sawdust, which they then wet. The sawdust expands and bursts the skull apart along its natural joints or sutures. These are then lined and wired, as you see. It is a most delicate and delicate art, done by an expert. Traumat of Paris is the leading artist in skulls and bones. The business of modeling these paper mache organs and of articulating bones is not an overworked one, as there is not a large demand for such things in schools and colleges, but the chief buyers of the articles. There are precious few students, as you may imagine, who can afford to invest so much money in models for private study.

Any hearts and lungs and livers that come to this country other than by way of the large office, it may be added, must pay 40 per cent duty to Uncle Sam.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Remedy For Scintilla.

There is a really old fashioned remedy, it is a grandmother's remedy, and the grandmother who believes in it is alive and recommends it personally. It is for scintilla.

Take equal parts of flour and red pepper and mix with vinegar. Make a paste of it and move it from place to place with the palm of the hand. "And if that does not help you then I am mistaken," concludes the grandmother.—New York Times.

Usher—A new conundrum! That had whiskers when I was a boy. A mouse is like a haystack because the cat'll eat it. New conundrum! Ho, ho! Ha, ha.

Professor—That isn't the answer at all. The points of resemblance are these: You can't find a needle in a haystack, and you can't find a needle in a mouse. Some people weary me exceedingly with their affection of superior knowledge.—Chicago Tribune.

BROUGHT BACK OLD TIMES. A Ditch That Was Set on the Re- sistant Hill of Erie.

The force of childhood recollections and the truth of the quotation, "A touch of nature makes the whole world kin," were graphically by a little incident in a restaurant the other day. A quiet looking, middle aged man of prosperous appearance was eating his dinner when another well dressed man took a seat opposite him. After giving his order in a blunt, genial manner, the newcomer took a sip of water and faced around. Suddenly an expression came over his face as he watched attentively the actions of his vis-a-vis, and apparently without realizing what he was doing he burst out in a loud tone, "Well, well!"

Every one at the table, including the quiet looking man, started, and the speaker, observing the direction of the speaker's gaze, turned his eyes upon him of the quiet appearance to see what had caused the exclamation. The man who had come in first was in the act of spreading sugar over a slice of buttered bread, and when he realized that all eyes were turned upon him he blushed like one detected in a heinous crime and almost fell off his chair. It took him a minute or two to recover, and then he said to the table in general:

"I used to get bread and butter and sugar for being good when I was a child, and eating it is a habit which I like to indulge in even yet. I know it isn't upon the restaurant bill of fare, but I couldn't resist the temptation. My mother used to put bread and butter and sugar in my lunchbox when I went to school as an 8-year-old up in the country town where I was raised, and I haven't eaten any since my childhood, and I guess I'll join you in a piece now for the sake of old times." And he did.—Bangor Whig.

CASHING DRAFTS ABROAD.

Easy Banking Methods Which Cause Americans Much Surprise.

"The continental banking methods are a great surprise to Americans," said a resident of New Orleans who has just returned from a trip abroad.

"When I was in Paris last month, I met a friend one day who had an English draft for 100 on one of the largest banks in the city and wanted to get the money. He had nobody to identify him, but said, half jokingly, that he was going to try for it anyhow, and we went to the place together.

"We were shown up stairs to a large reception room set aside especially for customers, and presently a messenger came in and took the check. About a dozen other people were also waiting in the room, and after a delay of about ten minutes a well dressed young gentleman came to the door and bowed off in a loud voice, 'Mr. John Smith.' My friend went up to try for it, but shortly got up and was handed a bundle of bank notes. No questions were asked.

"I was astonished, and in going out I took occasion to ask the well dressed young gentleman what the messenger wasn't taking desperate chances doing business in that catch as catch can fashion. 'And why?' he inquired, opening his eyes. I tried to explain, and he shrugged his shoulders. 'We have never had any losses,' he said.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Greatest Knitters in the World.

All the women of Shetland knit. They learn the art in early childhood and continue it all through their lives. The wool used for their knitting is grown on the islands and is carded and spun by the people themselves. Machinery they have not except the primitive spinning wheel. Many of the most elaborate shawls are knit months to make and some even years, so that a very fine shawl may be worth as much as $150 or $200. Most of the knitters are, however, of the more homely and serviceable kind and may be found in the women's market themselves for a very moderate price.

The manner in which the washing of knit shawls is accomplished in Shetland is a matter of interest to most visitors. They are washed carefully in soap and water, and then to prevent their shrinking they are laid from point to point of the scalloped border in a large square wooden frame and placed outside the cottage to dry.—Chicago News.

The Human Birds.

A facetious man who rejoices in the name of Bird conceives the idea of calling a convention of all the people in Philadelphia who belong to his tribe. Of course it was a joke, but a glance through the pages of the directory convinced him that such a gathering would be a big one. He discussed the matter with his neighbor, who specified their kinds was appalling. The list, as far as he went, was as follows: Doves; 15; Eagles; 3; Finches; 21; Fowls; 3; Hawks; 30; Jays; 1; Larks; 6; Juncos; 29; Pigeons; 1; Parrots; 40; Partridges; 30; Sparrows; 2; 1; Wrens; 10; Robins; 15; Nightingales; 9; Flickers; 5; Thrushes; 4; Canaries; 3; Geese; 2; and Turkey; 1. There were two Chipmunks, one of which was the smallest of the Philadelphia Record.

Denver's Great Chimney.

The tall chimney of the Grant smelter is an object of interest to every visitor to the center of the iron industry. It is the tallest in the United States and has but two rivals in the world. The following facts will give the reader an adequate idea of the immensity of this chimney: It is 622 feet 4 inches in height. There are 1,500 ladders in this immense shaft. Its weight above the foundation is 12,375,000 pounds. Its pressure at the base is 160 pounds to the square inch, and the total wind pressure against it is a mile would be 232 feet, and at the top 29 feet, 6 inches.

Setting a Neighbor Right.

"I've found your dog that was howling all night when you were just an even 'I guess it was."

"Why in thunder don't you feed him?"

GOOD WATER FROM TREES. Wells Which Yield Southern Water, men Tap With an Auger.

In many sections of the forest lands of the south during the dry seasons a man may walk for miles without finding a stream of water or a spring by which to quench his thirst. If, however, he is an experienced hunter and woodsman, he will not have to drink water from the stagnant pools in order to keep life in his body.

Quicker and easier than an experienced man can hunt for days through dry tracts and yet experience no inconvenience on account of the lack of water. Nature has provided a means which is only known to the initiated. Every old huntsman carries with him when going on a long hunt a small auger, by which he can secure a refreshing drink and water to cook with at any moment.

A cottonwood tree or a willow is the well which yields the water. He examines each tree until he finds one that has what a woodsman calls a "vein." It is simply an attenuated protuberance. By boring into this "vein" a stream of clear water flows out. It is not sap, but clear water. The huntsmen say that the water is better than the average to be had from ordinary wells. There is no sweetish taste about it, but it has a strong flavor of sulphur and is slightly carbonated.

The reason for this phenomenon cannot easily be explained, but that a supply of water can be contained in a tree is not so surprising. The fact of its flowing is the wonderful feature, showing that it must be under pressure. In other words, that there is more at the source of the supply. When it is considered that the trees furnish the water in the dry season and that the ground is literally baked, it is the more remarkable. The water does not extend to any great depth into the ground.—Memphis Scimitar.
