Shades of Julius Caesar must the old time democrats of Berks county, who have never voted for anyone but Andy Jackson be pushed to the wall by Admiral Dewey, who has always been a democrat, but never voted in his life. Too bad, too bad.

Orlando A. Traugh, editor of the Hollidaysburg Standard died last Friday. He was one of the oldest editors in Pennsylvania. He is survived by his wife, three daughters and one son. Editor Traugh was 80 years old when he died. He conducted the Standard 59 years.

The Saturday Evening Post, the oldest and most popular paper of Philadelphia, among its latest and most interesting features, is the life of the famous Dwight L. Moody, written according to his wish by his son W. R. Moody. The first of these papers entitled Moody as Boy and Business Man, appeared in the April 7 number. Don't fail to read it.

The old saying that he who runs away may live to fight another day, finds an illustration in the Filipinos' method of fighting. They ran away and scattered when the American army marched against them. The army was withdrawn from a number of districts under the belief that the Filipinos had come to a peaceful frame of mind. Not so, however, for the late telegrams say that wherever the army has been with-drawn the Filipinos have re-appeared.

Three hundred students of Bucknell University saved a large part of Lewistown from fire last Friday. The fire broke out in a foundry at the Pennsylvania station. The wind was high and blew myriads of sparks across the town southward firing houses and stables here and there in the direction of the wind. The fire department could only be in one place at one time, and it was just in that particular that the student became a great factor in the rescue of the town from the fiery demon. They scattered themselves on house-tops in the current of sparks and with buckets of water extinguished the fire as it fell.

The stable of David Naylor and Rev. Campbell were destroyed by fire last Thursday afternoon in Port Royal. A. J. Pettit had the Naylor stable rented and kept two horses there. Rev. Campbell and baker Bitner were among the first people upon the scene. The fire was in the hay-mow and was coming down into the horse-rack. They tried to get the horses out. One of the animals broke its halter and ran out all safe. The other animal was overcome in the flames. Citizens with buckets kept the roofs of the surrounding houses and stables wet, thereby keeping down a general conflagration. Four different houses were set on fire by the flames of the burning stables, but every fire on the rooves of houses were extinguished by the bucket brigade, showing that it is a good thing to do go on a wooden roof with a bucket of water in time of a neighboring fire. The stables were insured. It is not known how the fire originated.

The remains of Mrs. John A. Kauffman were brought from Harrisburg to this place on Thursday, April 5, for interment in the Presbyterian cemetery in this town. Mrs. Kauffman died of pneumonia at the home of her husband in Harrisburg. She and her husband lived many years in Patterson, where Mr. Kauffman was an employee of the railroad company. They have many acquaintances and friends in this community. They have lived at Harrisburg only since he was transferred to that place for duty on the road. Services were held in the Lutheran church in this town immediately upon the arrival of the remains at 1.11 p. m., on the 5th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman were both members of the Lutheran church in this town. After the services in the church interment took place in the Presbyterian cemetery Mrs. Kauffman is survived by her husband and one son J. H. Kauffman, residing at Harrisburg and daughter Miss Lou Kauffman, residing in Patterson.

The lot on which the old time brick hotel stood in McAlisterville, was sold to Dr. J. G. Heading by W. W. Sharon for $535. The hotel was destroyed by fire some years ago.

The Chairman of the late democratic state convention at Harrisburg, recognized only those who suited him. Whomsoever did not suit him, he did not hear or see. He ruled only for his friends.

A chicken incubator in the back office of the Banks drug store on Main street took fire on Sunday morning. Boyd Bergy a clerk in the store smelled the fire and ran back in time to extinguish the flame that was just spreading itself in such a way that a big fire would have soon been the result. The forty eggs of choice fowles in the incubator were rescued and are now nesting under clucks of old-time hatching proclivities and if the eggs were not to well cooked in the fire, a brood of nice chickens will be chick, chick, chicking in Dr. Lucian Banks' henery before many weeks have gone by.

On Monday evening Dr. Willard of Mexico was in town when telephone messengers were sent out to look him up on a sudden call from David Sieber living on the Sieber farm east of the town mentioned. Sieber had been severely hurt. He had gone to the barn to see to the live stock. His longabance made his wife uneasy and she went to the stable and found her husband lying helpless in the cow stable. He had been kicked by a cow on his right knee and so seriously hurt that he could not walk. He was taken to the house. It was believed by himself and family that his leg was broken and so the telephone informed the doctor, but when the doctor arrived with Samuel Richenbach as surgeon assistant, he found the limb unbroken, but the kneejoint so injured that the leg is in a worse condition than a straight break of a bone would be. When last heard from the patient was doing as well as could be expected.

Lewistown Sentinel, April 7 - Henry Hassinger, a Decatur township farmer, residing along the State road about two miles east of Alfarata, met with a horrible death yesterday afternoon about one o'clock. He was engaged during the day in burning some brush, when the fire started in the dry grass of the field and began spreading rapidly. To prevent it from reaching his buildings he started to plow up the ground, when the fire came upon him setting his clothing on fire and burning all his clothing off except his boots, even burning off his hair and whiskers, causing his death in a few minutes and burning his entire body to a crisp. Deceased was about 65 years old and leaves a family. The team of horses were burned to death. There was nothing left of the harness and the plow, but the iron belonging thereto. His hired man, Robert Lepley, was also severely burned about the arms and neck. The fire spread over nearly the entire farm, but no buildings were burned. The above facts were received from our Alfarata correspondent by telephone message.

An oil stove caused a blaze in the First National Bank on Monday morning. The weather that morning was cool and the janitor Charles Cox put a fire in the oil stove to take the chill out of the room, and then after all other matters for him to attend to at that time, half past six o'clock, he left the place to attend some affairs elsewhere. While he was away something got wrong with the oil stove and when Boyd Bergy came by he saw smoke about the windows and looking through a window saw a fire. Boyd Parker and William Harley came just then, and they burst open the front door. Boyd ran to the Banks drug store and brought a bucket of water and that was the first water thrown on the flames. Other buckets were obtained and the fountain being near, the flames were soon extinguished. There was little of combustible material near the stove and to that is owing the fact that the fire had little to work on. It would have taken some time before a big fire could have started there. A chair, desk and typewriter and the oil stove were the articles damaged, some of them almost beyond repair. If the fire had progressed till it found its way between the floors of the building a big fire would have been the result. The fire department was not notified. Those who first saw the flames helped to extinguish the fire and forget all about turning in a general alarm.
