OVER EIGHTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.

The Honorable J. N. Keller voted for a law that if enforced would take between eighty and ninety thousand dollars out of the pockets of those of the farmers of Juniata county whose lands were not clear of the Old William Penn King George land liens. The administration at Harrisburg was surely in need of money and they thought they would skin it out of the unpatriated land claims. Claims that in the most cases were generations old and in some cases came from beyond the Revolutionary war of 1776. If Mr. Keller would vote for such a bill in the lower house of Legislature what might he not vote for in the upper house to which he is now begging the voters to send him. He missed the opportunity of his life when he voted for that iniquitous bill. If he had voted against the bill he would have been one of the biggest statesmen in the Commonwealth. If farmers of the little county of Juniata had to pay under that iniquitous bill between eighty and ninety thousand dollars what would larger and wealthier counties have to pay? It would have been a racy plumb for the State Treasury but wormwood and gall for the men who did not know of the existence of such a claim against their lands. But the mere hint of a process at collection in some of the eastern counties raised the people to almost a pitch of violence and revolution. The authorities of Harrisburg were scared and when the next Legislature was convened it quickly repealed the bill, but that repeal does not excuse the men who passed the act. Mr. Keller helped to pass the bill. Mr. Keller did not help to repeal it. If men attempt to rob your house or your hen roost and you see them away they are none the less house-breakers and hen roost thieves. So it is with the members of the Legislature who made that law. They cannot escape from the responsibility of that act. They passed the law and ran away. It was entirely another Legislature that came and repealed the act and saved the land-holders. Now Mr. Keller's editors are coming forward and saying, "great good has come out of the act to take between eighty and ninety thousand dollars out of the pockets of certain farmers in Juniata county, because the next Legislature repealed the act. There is a saying that a poor excuse is better than none, but that excuse is worse than none. It is like telling a man whose house came nearly being robbed; like telling him after the robbers have been chased off: "My! my! dear friend, the robbers have done you a great good. They didn't get in to rob you because you fought them off and now you'll put bolts on your doors and they can't get at you to rob you and send you out into the world stripped of all your years of earnings." See how much good the fellows did who tried to break into your house and rob you.

AN UNLAWFUL CAUCUS.

The caucus story teller is abroad reporting that Mr. McKee is against caucus rule. The fact is an effort was made in the Senatorial Conference that nominated Mr. McKee to pass a resolution or pledge that the nominee will stand by whomsoever the republican legislative caucus might nominate for United States Senator. The conference did not have the power to make such a pledge and the resolution of course was not passed and now the enemies of Mr. McKee are circulating that he is against caucus rule. Mr. McKee was wise in not pledging himself months ahead. How could he know. How could any man know what a caucus may bring forth. How could he be any other man with the true spirit of republicanism, and true manhood pledge himself to the rule of a caucus that had not been born. A caucus yet in the womb of time. When born such a caucus might decide to support a future democrat for United States Senator. Mr. McKee is too good a republican to put the collar of a slave around his neck. A caucus nomination maybe all right and it may be all wrong. But it is a thing to be shy of when you know that it is run by a gang of men, who will trade off their grand-mother for a benefit at every opportunity. The managers of the unborn caucus were at the same kind of work in other districts in the state. Their work is unlawful and they could be punished in the courts for their unlawful work. No then when Mr. McKee refused to pledge himself to the work of a caucus not yet born he preserved his manhood and instead of being condemned he should be praised for what he did. Again, when Mr. McKee refused to join a combination to force the work of an unborn caucus, the work of which was dependent upon political combinations, he clearly kept himself inside the letter of the law and the Constitution of Pennsylvania and true republicanism. Vote for McKee.
