---One of the oldest inhabitants was recent ly interviewed by a reporter. He said his recollection of the winter of 1843 was that it was similar to the present. There was no sleighing until March, when snow fell a foot deep. January was mild and dry, and the grass and grain grew on the billsides. The third week in April he attended court at Danville, and encountered snow banks as high as the fences. We are satisfied with the old gentleman's almanac except the April part of it. We hope this season will differ with 1843 in that respect.

By a decision of the Supreme Court of this State, a case of trespass will not a good substantial fence at least five feet high. This tence must be kept up along the road as well as on any other part of the farm. The law provides a way to compel the building of line fences and until this is complied with no action of trespass can be maintained. Under the old English law, fences were erected to keep cattle in and owners were held responsible for all the damage they did to their neighbors regardless of tence. But it seems the Pennsylvania Supreme Court have reversed this law and made fences necessary for the purpose of keeping a neighbor's cattle out. This may be considered a better law but it appears to us to be poorer common sense. A little wholesome legislation upon this subject is certainly demanded.

DEATH OF JAMES LAGRANGE, ESQ.—James LaGrange, at one time the most promising member of the Broome County bar, and an able man in all respects, died at his residence on Susquehanna street, in the Fourth ward, last week. Mr. LaGrange was some fifty years of age, a son of the late Caleb LaGrange of Vestal. and was one of the best known men of the county. He was a college graduate of distinction and after a course of preparation passed one of the most creditable examinations and was admitted to the bar under flattering auspices, immediately taking a place in the firm of Tallent, LaGrange & Odell, and took a front rank among our lawyers. About the same time he married Laura, daughter of Dr. Daniels of Union, who, with quite a family of children

Mr. LaGrange had what is termed a legal mind, and could at all times solve the most intricate questions of law and equity that were presented to him, but lured from his duties by the siren of the glass, he fell from his high estate, when the seeds of disease were fastened on his vitals and after suffering for years has passed away living out but half his days .-Binghamton Democrat.
