A Wonderfully Practical Man.

He was a wonderfully practical man (says the Danbury News,) and she was marvellously poetical. To her, life had been a dream, edged with gold and filled in with loveliness of ros eate hues. But to him appeared everything in the home spun garb of everyday life. He is a country merchant, and buys his goods in New York. His partner slways went to the city on business connected with the grocery; but the partner was recently taken ill, and our extremely practical friend was obliged to go, It was his first visit to the great city, and he was to be gone three days. It was a monientous eventto his fond wife. Do the best she could her mind was troubled with forebodings. It is dilficult to tell just how he felt; but while it was evident that he felt the importance of the step he was about to take, still he never lost sight of the fact that a mighty responsibility was resting on his shoulders, and that all private emotions must be subserved to public interests .-His carpet-bag was packed, and his hand on the door to pass out of the house, when she bade him good-bye. She put both her arms around his neck.

"John," she sobbed, "you are going away." This was so palpable that it would have been madness to attempt a denial; so he merely ob-

"Look out for my collar, Maria."

"You will think of your wife when you are gone?" she whispered, huskily.

He was a triffe nervous under the pressure of her arms upon his collar; but he answered reassuringly:

"I will bear it in mind, my dear." "You will think of me as mourning your absence, and anxiously awaiting your return ?" she murmured. "You can trust me to attend to it," he replied with as much firmness as if it had been a request for six barrels of mackerel.

"And you will be very careful of yourself for my sake?" she suggested in a broken voice. "I will see it attended to, my dear, but it is almost time for the train," and he gravely sought to remove her arms from his neck. "John! John!" she convulsively cried, don't

"Maria," he said, with a tinge of reproach in his tone, "I have made a memorandum to that offect."

And then she let him go-still tearful but confident it would be attended to.

Understands Woman's Nature.

At the lower end of Woodward yesterday an old apple woman offered her fruit to a yessel captain who was sighing over the good old times of 1864. She wanted three cents apiece for her apples. He gave her a pleasant look and said:

"Well, well; why, you look as young as you did ten years ago. Same bright eyes and red cheeks-some white teeth." "Take an apple for two cents, captain," she

"I presume you are fifty years old," he continued, "but who'd know it? Lots of ladies at 30 look as old as you do."

"Take an apple for a cent, captain," she an swered, smiling like a rose.

"Some rich old fellow will come along some day searching for a buxom wife," said the captain, "and you won't have to peddle apples any more."

'Here, captain, two for a cent ; take two of the biggest !" she exclaimed, and then run after him and dropped two more in his evercoat

Burgiars.

Last Wednesday night the very earth stopped revolving pausing, as it were at the deeds of bravery enucted by the heroes whose names we have given in capital letters above. At a lighe after midnight, when churchyards yawn and the imbibers of rot gut whiskey are chasing snakes around a bed post, a noise like unto several demoniac burglars were heard by William Patterson Decker endeavoring to effect an entrance into the rooms over Perry's grocery store. His blood vin cold, his eyes stuck out like two pumpkins in a bushel basket as he tried to crawl over to the back side of the bed, remarking to his wife that she had better get up and see if she had blown out the light in the hall. Just then Edwin Dahomer Goff who had heard the noise, crawled stealthily up to Decker's room and gave a rap on the door .-William Patterson bounded as if a brick had hit him abdominalwise.

"You old fool go to the door," said his 。"自然在中国为外 wife. "A n-d a-n-d get mur - d e-r-e-d," said William Patterson' shaking like a goose in a rain storm. He finally mustered up courage enough to enquire, "who-o-o-st-h-e r-e!"

"Why, it's me," said Edward Dahomey Goff, "there's burglars in the block and they'll burn us all up; come on"!

"Y_e-s, I, Ia-m c-o-m-1-n-g." In the excitement of the moment William Patterson Deckerhad put on his hat and, boots but his pants and vest which hung on a chair remained undisturbed, and he looked as he stuod in the hall, if we may believe Edwin Dahomey Goff, like a four pound codfish on Stilts.

"What had we better do," said Edwin Dahomey Goff, somewhat agitated.

"I guess I'-d b-e-t-ter go ter b-e-d," quakingly replied William Patterson. But they finally decided to rouse up Char lie Rathbone who slept in the same block Awaking him they made known their errand and William Patterson Decker armed with a revolver, and Charlie and Dahomey with wag on spokes, started to make short work of the burglars. Stopping in front of the room where the supposed burglars were in the act of touching a match to some combustible material, it is proper that we give the position of the braves as related to us by Rathbone. Charlie ahead with spoke raised and within ten feet of the door; Edwin Dahomey Goff next armed with a spokeland lantern , William Patterson Decker in the rear, holding the revolver at arm's length and whispering

"Go i-n; g-o i-n; you d-n c-o-w-a-r-d-s

"Go in yourself, go in yourself, if you're so brave," said Rathbone, whose hair by this time stood on end.

The party, weighing in the aggregate 250 pounds, stood there with cheeks like marble, muttering one to the other, "go on, go on, l'il stand by you." Finally Edwin Dahomey got a sixteen foot 2x4 hemlock scantling, and turning half way around ready to run, struck and opened the door, and seeing nobody inside cautiously entered, William Patterson bringing up the rear, shouting, while he held his revolver at arms length-is he? show him to me." At last the awful moment came. The stillness that pervaded all nature was terrible-ev en Howell's snore was hushed; the clouds were dark and threatening, the moon looked sad and William Patterson Decker's knees with the rest lent an indescribable horror to the surroundings. The noise of the burglar was heard in the adjoining room. Hush, he is at his nefarious work. Soon the building will be in flames. The braves approach the villain. They open the door. Hush! Tiger like they draw nigh. William Patterson Decker extends his revolver. Edwin Dahomey Goff throws from his lautern a flood of light on the scene. And before them in ambolical ugliness, stands Howell's big cat with a rat in her mouth. The heroes all of a sudden become alarmingly courageous, and depart, William Patterson telling his wife, when he blew out the light to go to bed again, that she might go to sleep in perfect safety as he had driven the burglars clear out of town.

The next day Mrs. D. was telling one of the neighbors that she did hope there wouldn't be another war, for William Patterson was so brave that he would rush right into the army.

Shocked Enough,

"Want a shock, a shock, sir? Only costs you ten cents," cried the electrical battery man on Madison street this ferencon, to an elderly
