

Hayes and Wheeler.

It is not possible altogether to conceal the chagrin felt by the radical press at the defeat of every conspicuous or honored representative of the Republican party at Cincinnati. The Philadelphia Press breaks out in double headed agony as follows: "Hayes and Wheeler, nominated Pennsylvania would have rung with grateful responses. As it is, even the respected name of Governor Hayes failed at first to awaken even the slightest enthusiasm; and while our people last night retired to their beds satisfied with him, they were thoroughly convinced that they had been deprived of their favorite by the lowest arts of contriving politicians."

The result of yesterday's action by the Cincinnati convention disappointed almost everybody. After the hopes which had been inspired by the previous balloting, in which the favorite candidate had held his own against the desperate efforts to divide his forces, the eager crowd which lingered in front of the newspaper and telegraph offices, were hardly prepared to receive the unwelcome intelligence that Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, had been nominated for President of the United States.—Allegheny Mail (Rep.)

As a result, Pennsylvania occupies her old place—the tail-piece in a Presidential nomination. In doing this it has insulted the people of Western Pennsylvania. We do not know of many Republican who did not prefer Blaine, in the western part of the state, and this was generally true of the east. Yet against the sentiment of the party the state ring arrayed itself, and by tactics which ought not to have succeeded, neutralized the force of the state whilst others involved in the plot defeated Blaine.—Pittsburg Gazette (rep.)

The case may thus be summed up:—With Blaine, the Republican party would have been completely broken and defeated at the very opening of the campaign; with Bristow, it would have been triumphant; with Hayes, it enters upon a doubtful struggle for existence, dependent upon the chances of the Democratic nomination and the popular humors of the campaign.—Springfield Republican (Ind.)

The Cincinnati convention selected a man unknown to statesmanship, unknown to reform, and unknown to party traditions; it took him as the only hope of averting the triumph of the corruptionists, with which the party would have been whirled to the ruin which awaits it in any event.—N. Y. Sun (Ind.)

The Cincinnati convention has proved a thorough disappointment to the masses of Republicans all over the country.—Last night there was a feeling of general sorrow that little and envious politicians, usual with but little reputations, though measurably powerful by virtue of the political machinery which has been so strongly condemned by the Bristow "reformers," should capture those very reformers, and by a bold push defeat the only man who has a national reputation, and who is to-day the idol of the people. Massachusetts has done itself no credit whatever; and if R. H. Dana did not lie when he said in the convention that Bristow was the only man who is certain to carry Massachusetts, the state may go Democratic next fall. Hayes is a good man, but it will take an immense amount of campaigning to make him known to the people.—Troy Whig (Rep.)

Exterminate the Potato Bug.

A letter from Prof. Packard has just been published by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Middletown Conn. which contains these statements:

The potato bug may be looked for early in June. Its eggs will be found on the under side of the leaves; they are bright orange red and quite large. The beetle itself is a roundish insect, half an inch long, has ten black stripes on the back and is reddish underneath. It is larger than the "lady bug," which somewhat resembles it. The grub is thick, fat and orange red in color, lives about ten days on the leaves and stems, after which it enters the ground, and becomes a beetle. Thus nearly all the life of the insect is passed on the plant. The offspring of last year's beetles will begin to lay eggs in about fifty days from the time the egg from which itself sprang was deposited. Probably not more than two crops will appear in our climate, but each female is capable of producing more than a thousand eggs. The remedies are hand-picking, both of the mature beetle, the grubs and the eggs. They should all be burned.

Paris green is largely used. This is a most deadly poison, containing arsenic. It is almost insoluble in water. It may be mixed with plaster, flour or fine dry earth, and dusted on the plants from a sifter or bellows, or applied stirred up in water, about a tablespoonful to a pailful, and thrown from a syringe or sprinkled from a water-pot. In any case great care must be taken not to breathe the dust or handle with naked hands. A number of specimens collected in New York are being analyzed in the laboratory of the station. They range in price from 28 cents per pound (wholesale) to 18 cents, and contain from 10 to 46 per centum of insoluble adulterations. The arsenic varies from 55 per centum in the best to 20 per centum in the lowest grades.—Some are mixtures of Scheele's green, others are Schweinfurth green. The former, when pure, contains 7 1/2 per centum of arsenious acid and 28 1/2 per centum of copper oxide. The latter should contain 58 per centum arsenious acid; 31 per centum copper oxide and 10 per centum acetic acid. From these facts it appears that it will be most economical to buy the best. Ask for pure Paris green. It will probably cost 50 cents per pound.—If it seems to be of doubtful quality send a small sample to the station at Middletown for analysis, first finding out the name of the manufacturer. No time should be lost if the potato crop is to be saved, as the beetle has appeared in alarming numbers in many parts of the States.—Hartford Courant.

Vermont Lager.

The old question of, whether lager beer will intoxicate, has just been passed upon by a minor Court in Vermont. Under the prohibitory law of that State a keg of lager had been seized in a saloon as contraband and the owner claimed its restoration on the ground that the liquor was not intoxicating and hence did not come within the provisions of the liquor law. The main evidence of the prosecution was the testimony of a physician that lager beer contained six per cent of alcohol; and that of two other witnesses one an expert in the consumption of the article, named Philips, who swore that he had drunk a good deal of it but had never got very hot on that alone. He testified that on one occasion he had drunk it all night until he was chucked full and thought he weighed two hundred and that it made him light headed; but the counsel for the defense made the point that it had not been shown that the witness was not light headed when he began his night's work. The third witness for the prosecution swore that he once drank lager beer enough in New Haven to lay him out for six hours. On the other side an array of physicians was produced several of whom testified to the effects of lager from their own experience. Dr. Pond said that he found only 4.6 per cent. of alcohol in the beer seized, and that a man might drink from fifteen to twenty glasses, and, aside from feeling a little sleepy or stupid, experience no effects from it. Dr. Adams testified that he had drunk lager beer very freely—all that he could hold—had drunk until he was chucked full, and should as soon think of getting drunk on new milk; and five other physicians gave it as their opinion that lager is not intoxicating. The result was that the jury returned a verdict in favor of the owner of the beer so that it is established in Vermont, unless the verdict should be reversed by a higher Court, that lager beer is not intoxicating and may be sold without violating the State liquor law.
