Treatment of Pigs selected for Fattening.

Careful experiments have proved that time is economized, and that pork can be most cheaply produced by pushing pigs forward as rapidly as possible from the time of their birth to that of their slaughter, giving them regularly, at least three per day, all the most suitable food for this purpose which they will eat up clean, and digest. The last three weeks or so, finish off with Indian meal pudding or whole corn, with pure fresh water for drink. Old corn or well ripened and dry of the season's growth is the best. This makes the sweetest and most solid pork of anything I have tried. Some contend that roots and pumpkins have so great a proportion of water in them that if fed with the whole corn or meal, they tend to an increased appetite, keep the bowels in better order, and lessen the quantity of water a fattening animal would otherwise drink. They add also that this combined feed lessens the cost of fattening, and makes as sweet and solid meat as corn alone. I cannot vouch for this method, never having followed it; but if I did I should use the sugar beet in preference to other roots, and the winter squash in preference to other pumpkins, for I think they are best fitted for this purpose.—American Stock Journal.

INFLAMED EYES.—Bathe freely with salt and water, or poultice with tea leaves.
