THE AFTER TIME.

Into the web the workman weaves Colors of gloom 'midst these of gold, Laces made bright, with frost-like leaves Sack cleth made coarse with texture cold. Each web has its own true sphere ; Lace for kings ; and sackcloth lowly That adorns the pheasant's bier Is in God's sight, just as holy.

Into the web of life. His hand, pain,

Whilst we so frail, scarce understand The werid strong thread 'twixt heart and brain,

How He weaver, and how we fret On the loom with all its changes ! One day shows life's fabric wet With sad tears, that faith estranges.

After the labor comes the praise. And so the workman labors on, Catching bright beauty from the rays Of sunset fair, and blushing dawn, Some day at a master's feet He shall cast in all its splendor That web perfected, and complete, Formed so, by his great love, tender.

'Tis thus God weaving, in each life Sees every fault with tenderness, And from our pain and years of strife, He weaveth out that sin's redress. Sometime, perhaps when we stand With our work crowned by his sweetness We shall bless the loving hand That wove from life a grand completeness.

THE BROKEN-HEARTED.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIEB.

I have seen the infant sinking down like's stricken flower to the grave; the strong man fiercely breathing out his soul upon the field of battle; the miserable convict standing upon the scaffold, with a deep curse upon his lips,-I have viewed death in all its forms of darkness and vengeance, with a fearless eye, but I never could look on woman-young and lovely woman-fading away from the earth in beautiful and uncomplaining melancholy, without feeling the very fountain of life turned to tears and dust. Death is always terrible, but when a form of angel beauty is passing off to the silent land of the sleepers, the heart feels that something lovely is ceasing from existence, and broods with a sense of utter desolation over the lonely thoughts that come up like spectres from the grave to haunt our midnight musings. A few years since, I took up my residence for a short time in a country village in the eastern part of New England. Soon after my arrival, I became acquainted with a lovely girl, apparently about seventeen years of age. She had lost the idol of her pure heart's purest love, and the shadows of deep and holy memories were resting like the wing of death upon her brow. I first saw her in the presence of the mirthful. She was indeed a creature to beworshipped ; her brow was garlanded with the young year's sweetest flowers; her young locks were hanging beautifully and low upon her bosom, and she moved through the crowd with such a floating and unearthly grace, that the bewildered gazer almost looked to see her fade away into the air, like the creation of some pleasant dream. She seemed cheerful and even gay, yet I saw that her gayety was but the mockery of her feelings.' She smiled but there was something in her smile which told that its mournful beauty was the bright reflection of a tear; and her eyelids at times closed heavily down, as if struggling to repress the tide of agony that was bursting up from her heart's secret urn. She looked as if she could have left the scene of festivity; and gone out beneath the quiet stars, and laid her forehead down upon the fresh green earth, and poured out her stricken soul, gush after gush, till it mingled with the eternal fountain of life and purity. Days and weeks passed on, and that sweet girl gave me her confidence, and 1 became to her a brother. She was wasting away by discase. The smile upon her lip was fainter, the purple veins upon her cheek grew visible, and the cadance of her voice became daily more weak and tremulous. On a quiet evening in the depth of June, I wandered out with her in the open air. It was then that she first told me the tale of passion, and of the blight that had come down like mildew upon her life. Love had been the portion of her existence. Its tendrills had been twined around her heart in its earliest years; and when they were rent away, they left a wound which flowed till all the springs of her soul were blond." "I am passing away,"she said, "and it should be so. The winds have gove over my life, and the bright buds of hope, and the sweet blossoms of passion are scattered down, and lie withering in the dust, or rotting away upon the chill waters of memory. And yet I cannot go down among the tombs without a tear. It is hard to leave the friends who love me ; it is very hard to bid farewell to these dear scenes, with which I have held communion from childhood ; and which, from day to day, have caught the color of my life, and sympathized with its joys and sorrows. That little | that an experienced pourer of tea waits till all grove, where I have so often strayed with my | the cups are returned to her before she fills any buried love, and where at times, and even now, the sweet tones of his voice seem to come steal ing around me, till the whole air becomes one intense and mournful melody-that pensive for a time around a bed of roses, and then dies, "as 'twere from very sweetness."

It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble, cast off by the ocean of eternity, to fioat a moment upon its waves, and sink into darkness and nothingness. Else why is it that the high and glorious aspirations, which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts, are forever wandering abroad unsatisfied ? Why is it that the rainbow and the cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off, and leave us, to muse upon their faded loveliness? Why is it that stars, which hold their Must weave stange threads of care and festivals around the midnight throne, are set above the grasp of our limited faculties-forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of our affection to flow back in an Alpine torrent upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth.....There is a realm where the rainbow never fades, where the stars will be spread out before us like islands that slumber on the ocean-and where the beautiful beings which here pass before us like visions, will stay in our presence torever. Bright creature of my dreams-in that realm I shall see thee again. Even now thy lost image is sometimes with me In the mysterious silence of midnight, when the streams are glowing in the light of the many stars, that image comes floating upon the beam that lingers around my pillow, and stands before me In its pale, dim loveliness, till ite own quiet sinks like a spell from heaven upon my thought and the grief of years is turned to blessedness and peace.

MARRIAGE MAXIMS.

The following marriage maxims are worth of more than a hasty reading :

1. The very nearest approach to domestic happiness on earth is the cultivation on both sides of resolute unselfishness.

2. Never scold at one another, either alone or in company, set a set of the s

3. Never both get angry at once; better never get angry at all.

4. Never speak loud to one another, unless the house is on fire.

5. Let each one strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.

6. Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed ; and then do not scold about it.

7. Never taunt with a past mistake.

8. Neglect the whole world besides, rather

KIDNEY COMPLAINT.

Probably there is no complaint that afficts the human system, which is so little understood at the present time, as some of the varied forms of Kidney Complaints.

There is no discase which causes such acute pain or more alarming in its results than when the kidneys fail to secrete from the blood the aric acid, and other polsonous substances, which the blood accumulates in its circulation through the system.

If from any cause the kidneys fail to perform the functions devolving upon them, the accumulations are taken up by the absorbents and the whore system thrown into a state of disease, causing great pain and suffering, and very often immediate death. Hence the importance of kamping the bidgers and block in the importance of keeping the kidneys and blocd in a healthy condition, through which all the impurities of the blood must pass.

NEARLY BLIND.

H. R. Stevens: Dear Sir-In expressing my thanks to you for benefit de ived from the use of Vegetine, and to benefit others, I will state-When eight or nine years old I was afflicted with Scrofula, which made its appearance in my eyes, face and head, and I was very near blind for two years. All kinds of operations where proceeded on my eyes call to not of operations were performed on my eyes, and all to no good result. Finally the disease principally settled in my body, limbs and fees, and at times in an aggravated W8Y.

Last Summer I was from some cause weak in my Last Summer I was from some cause weak in my spine and kidneys, and it was at times very hard to re-tain the urme. Seeing your advertisement in the Com-mercial, I bought a bottle of Vegetine, and commenced usir g according to directions. In two, or three days I obtained great relief. After using four or five bottles I noticed it had a wonderful effect on the rough, scaly blotches on my body a. d legs. I still used Vegetine and the humorous sores one after another disappeared until they were all gone, and I attribute the cure of the until they were all gone, and I attribute the cure of the two diseases to Vegetine and nothing else.

H. R. Stevens, esq.: Dear Sir-1 nave been hadly af-flicted with Kidney Complaint for ten years; have suf-fered great pain in my back, hips and side, with great difficulty in passing urine, which was often, and in very small quantities, frequently accompanied with blood and excitutiating pain. I have faithfully tried most of the popular remedies recommended for my complaint: I have been under the treatment of some of, the most skillful physicians in Boston, all of whom prenounced my case incurable.

Complaint.

Boston, all of whom pronounced my case incurable, This was my condition when I was advised by a friend to try Vegetine, and I could see, the good effects from the first dose I took, and from that moment I kept on improving until I was entirely cured, taking inall, I should think, about. six bottles. It is indeed a valua-ble medicine and if I should be afflicted again in the same way, I would give a dollar a dose, if I could not get it without. Respectfully,

10. Never part for a day without leaving words to think of during absence.

11. Never meet without a loving welcome. 12. Never let any fault you have committed go until you have frankly confessed it, and ask forgiveness.

13. Never let the sun go down upon any anger or grievance.

14. Never forget the happiness of early love.

15. Never sigh over what might have been, but make the best of what is.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

had just returned from the West, was telling of a narrow escape he had from a terrible death. He was crossing a long railroad bridge on foot, wheh he was surprised to see a locomotive coming around a curve and tearing toward him at a terific speed. The bridge was too narrow to allow of escape on either side, and he did not dare to jump into the yawning abyss below. In a flash he took in the situation and formed his plan of action. He started on a swift run toward the on coming locomotive, and, when, within a few feet of it, he concentrated all his nerve and muscle into one effort and leaped straight up in the air. The fearful monster shot under him and he came down on the bridge saved from death. There was a moment of deep silence upon the close of this narration. Then one of the company sighed, and shut up his knife, and unexpectedly said, "What is the use of presence of mind when a man can lie that ?"

ABOUT TEA.

There is more to be learned about pouring out tea and coffee than most ladies are willing to believe. If these decoctions are made at the table, which is far the best way, they require experience, judgment and exactness; it they be brought on the table ready made it still requires judgment so to proportion them that they shall prove sufficient in quantity for the family party, and that the older members shall have the stronger cups. Often persons pouring out tea, who not being at all aware that the tea grows strong as you proceed, bestow the poorest cup upon the greatest stranger and give the very youngest, member of the family the strongest, who should have been without .--Where several cups of equal strongth are wanted you should pour a little into each, and then go back, inverting the order as you fill them up, and the strength will be proportioned pro perly. This is so well understood in England a second time, that all may share alike.

Robert Hall, on a journey, had preached very powerfully at an evening meeting, when another minister in the pulpit with him, Gutridge

If I am ever affected with any thing of the kind agsin I hall try Vegetine as the only reliable remedy. Once more accept my thanks, and believe me to be, Very respectfully, AUSTIN PARROTT. Dec. 1, 1872. No. 35 Gano St., Cincinasti, Ohio.

Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, &c., are always unpleasant, and at times, they become the most distressing and dangerous diseases that can affect the human system. Most diseases of the kidneys arise from impurities in the blood, auxing humors which settle on these parts. Vegetine excells any known remedy in the whole world for eleansing and purifying the blood, thereby causing a heaithy action to all the organs of the body.
