CENTENNIAL LETTER.

DEAR DEMOCRAT: Having just returned from the great International Exhibition at Philadelphia, I am impressed with the opinion that I should break my long continued silence and say something. But where can humanity commence? Where can language find words, or intellect, or expression? All through the patriotic summer of 1876, able correspondents have portrayed through the medium of the press, the multiplying beauties of the exhibits; until October finds the nations of the earth blended in our wholesale Exhibition with the United States, glorious in its outlines and sublimely complete in all its departments. But, where can we begin, feeble in expression and more feeble in brains. Shall we endeavor to portray the gigantic vases which graced the interior of nearly every nation represented? No!

spur of transplanted Rocky mountains, prepared by the taxidermist, Mrs. Maxwell, or the clock which needs winding but once in 100 years said, to be the nearest attainment to perpetual motion yet discovered; or the Cabinet prepared from the various woods of Kansas containing 1876 pieces; or the huge apple, Gloria Mundi, which weighed twenty-four ounces and measured 15 1/2 inches in circumference and was sent to Mrs. Gov. Hayes the day after we saw it.

What would it suffice if we tell that we saw the "Large Horse," 21 1/2 hands high and weighed 2,800 pounds, or "Trustee," a race horse imported by Captain Stockton, of New Jersey, in 1835, and was valued at $20,000, or "George M. Patchen," a famous trotter, in Government Building? Or, how can we describe the Siamese Plough measuring 15 feet from the end of the handle to the termination of the beam, or the ponderous machine of a cart from Siam with no iron entering into its construction, or an American plough of 1776, or Daniel Webster's plough, for four oxen, of 18 feet dimensions from the tip of the handles to end of beam; and yet these articles were all there, to be out-dazzled by a superb riding plough from the State of Kentucky?

There also were those two stuffed white Chester hogs, the first aged 19 months, which weighed 1,253 pounds and the second aged 21 months, weighing 1,307 pounds, one of which increased in weight at the rate of 120 pounds a month, or 4 pounds a day. In Agricultural Hall, the skeleton of a Mylodon from Buenos Ayres, was exhibited of massive proportions, and prodigious strength, sufficient to have pulled up by the roots, with ease, a 50 year old hickory tree. The skeleton stands in a leaning position, over 12 feet high and must measure 25 feet from the end of the nose to the tip of the enormous tail.

In the Main Building, an interesting exhibit of geological significance was the Hadrosaurus Foulkh, a gigantic extinct lizard from the green marl deposits at Haddonfield, N. J., in a fine state of preservation. The Art Gallery, or Memorial Hall, was filled with beauty and genius; and no human tongue could portray the wondrous exhibits of paintings and sculpture, which kind hands have placed upon those walls for American eyes to feast upon.

The paintings of Andobon, of Benjamin West, of Rotersnel, of Bierstadt, of Rosenthal, of Rosa Bonheur, of Murillo, of Broynikoff, of Lemock, of Castellans, of Lodigiani, of Hockert, of Altmann, of Wittkamp, of Wertheimer, of Ortleb, of Becker, and a legion of other artists and sculptors have presented from the fountains of genius and application a grand panorama to which the most fastidious and highly educated need make no exceptions. Among the charming paintings so far beyond the scope of human language, with awe and admiration we would mention "Rizpah defending the remains of her sons" founded on II Sam. 21st chapter, from the 1st to the 15th verse, "The last days of Pompeii," "The New Republic," "The Battle of Gettysburg," "The Republic of Venice doing homage to Caterina Cornaro," "Elaine," "The first mourners," "The death of General Wolfe," "Christian martyrs in the Colosseum," "Cremation of Caesar," "Cruelty of Adolph to his father in the Netherlands," and, so many more, we can only say, "go and see yourself."

In the Women's Pavilion, although a slight exponent of her labors as a sex, yet we found many rare sculptures, paintings, designs, embroideries, &c., which were truly suggestive of invention and genius. "Triton," a large piece of marble sculpturing by Harriet Hosmer, of Rome, bespoke great artistic skill as a sculptor. A painting of "An old woman who lived in a shoe, and had so many children she didn't know what to do—" was a very mirthful expression of the ancient couplet. "Truth unvelving Falsehood" was a fine piece of marble statuary, by Miss Lillie M. Spencer, in 1869.

We cannot describe to you the splendid exhibit of stuffed seals, sea-lions, white whale, deers, bears, walrus, buffaloes, &c., in the Government building, from the Smithsonian Institute, at Washington, D. C. And Russia, glorious in her barbaric magnificence, almost surpassed other nations in her brilliant and costly furs, minerals, velvets, brocades, gold, and silverware. A malachite mantlepiece was valued at $6,500, and was inlaid with diamond squares forming stars of precious stones such as mottled blue Lapis lazuli, mottled purple porphyry, Labrador, aventurine, &c. The fruit medallions on the top and sides of the mantlepiece were remarkable for their artistic arrangement and fineness of execution.

The blue grapes were of amethyst, the green grapes were nephrite, leaves and stalks were formed of ophyte, and the remaining fruits were made of jasper, rhodonite, topaz, agate, rock crystal and other beautiful stones. Two large malachite vases in Etruscan and Roman workmanship were valued at $4,500, and two others smaller were beautiful. Two side boards of Russian oak, inlaid with malachite and fruit medallions were beautiful to behold and was valued at $900. A pair of lapis lazuli vases were so tempting, at only $2,000.

A number of center tables in the same department, with solid gilded bronze legs and smoothly polished malachite tops varied from $120 to $2,400. A group of four stuffed bear cubs, called the "Bear family" were very attractive. The Weed sewing machine made a remarkable exhibit of its capabilities in a representation of the "death of Major Gen. Warren at the battle of Bunker Hill." No less than seven teen portraits of eminent officers in the Revolutionary war, were copied in chenille from Trumbull's original painting, composing a picture probably 8 feet wide by 6 feet high, with proper colors and 8,640,000 stitches, which attached us to our favorite at home, more than either.

In the Horticultural Hall, found the Strelitzia Regui, a large tropical plant bearing a yellow flower shaped like a bird's tongue and beak; banana trees in bloom; the Yucca, or cove tree of South America, which, when pierced, yields milk; the screw pine and bird's nest fern; all tropical wonders to admiring eyes. In Machinery Hall, the clap and climax of the entire Centennial affair, in our estimation, was the mammoth Corliss engine, possessing a 1,400 horse power and twenty boilers in an adjoining building. The numerous church pieces were very touching in their illustrations of Christ in the different phases of his life, from when an infant in the manger worshipped by the wise men of the East; he was next taken from the Cross and laid upon his mother's knee with the blood trickling from His sacred brow and from His pierced side, for you and for me, Oh, reader! I shall never forget that church piece in the French Department, how it appealed to the sentiment, the imagination, the solemnity of the soul and gave a permanent impression of the scene not soon forgotten.

But no doubt, the readers of the DEMOCRAT are wearied with Centennial notes ere this; so with a profound bow of humiliation for our ignorance; and a consoling shake of hand thankfulness because we've been to the International Exhibition at Philadelphia, and have it in our dreams for years to come, we subscribe ourselves as usual— BETTIE BLUE STOCKING. Auburn, Pa., Nov. 6, 1876.
