office-holder was twice his size, and at one blow would qualify him for an obituary notice. He agreed to retract, and as the visitor insisted apon writing the letraction himself, he sat down to his task.

Squire S. made an excuse to walk to the printing-office, with a promise be back in time to sign it when it was finished.

8. had hardly gone fifty rods when he encountered a man who inquired where Squire. S's office was, and if he was at home. Suspecting that he, too, was on the same errand as the other visitor, he pointed to the office, and old him he would find the editor within, writing an abusive article against office-holders .---This was enough. The eyes of the new-comer flashing fire, he rushed into the office, and assailed the stranger with the epithets. "liar, scoundrel, coward ;" and told him he would teach him how to write. The gentlnman, supposing it was some bully sent there by the editor, sprang to his feet and a fight ensued. The table was upset and smashed into firewood, the contents of a large jug of ink stood in puddles on the floor, the chairs had their legs and backs broken beyond the skill of surgery to quired : cure them. This seemed only to inspire the combatants with still greater fury. Blow followed blow with the rapidity of lightning .--First one was kicked on the floor, then the oth er, each taking it in turn pretty equally. The ink on the floor found its way to their taces, till both of them cut the most ludicrous figure imaginable. The noise and uproar were tremenduous. The neighbors ran to the door, and exclaimed that two negroes were fighting in Squire S.'s office. None dared seperate them At length, completely exhausted, they ceased fighting. The circumstances of the case became known, and the next day, hardly able to sit on horseback, their heads bound up, they started homeward, convinced that they had attained very little satisfaction from the attempt.

WANTED A, TESTIMONIAL.

They had quarreled Sunday evening. He got mad and swore he'd leave her. Then she got vexed and told him he could do as he pleased. He left. The next night he came around again. He asked to see her alone. She readily complied. She was all of a tremor. Her heart went out to him in a gush of sympathetic love. She stood ready to throw both arms about his neck, and cry out her joy. There was not much color in his face, and his voice was husky. He said :

"I have been with you six months, Matilda, and I tried in all that time to do what was right." He paused an instant to recover the voice which was faltering rapidly, while her trembling increased. "I know that I have got control it as I ought. But I have tried to be falthful to you, tried to do everything that I thought would tend te make you happy. And feeling this I have called to see if you would be

A KNOTTY QUESTION. 1. 1. 11.

A Raleigh lawyer was interviewed lately by an agriculturists living a score of miles from the city, who said he wanted to secure a aivorce from his wife.

"You don't live happily with her, eh ?" inquired the attorney. "No; we don't seem to hitch wuth a cent," was the quiet reply.

"Does she scold and fret, and make your home a hell on earth, so to speak ?" continued the lawyer.

"That's her exactly."

"And you are prepared to prove that you have a peaceful disposition, and that you have done everything you could to make home pleasant?"

"You bet I am ! anybody as knows me will swear that I wouldn't hurt a flea, and that I I move around home like an angel !"

"Well, I guess we can make out a case," said the lawyer, as he took up his pen and began to jot down the points. After a moment he in-

"Do you think you will contest the case !--Has she any defense?"

"Waal, now, I never thought of that," slowly replied the farmer. "I didn't know as she had anything to say about rt."

"She may have. Has she any grounds for complaint against you ?".

"I don't know much about law," answered the client in a hesitating way.

"I know I've got a hankering after her sister Mariar, and her sister Mariar has a hankering after me, but whether them is good grounds for complaint I don't know."

· The lawyer hasn't filed a bill yet.

TOM COOKE, THE ACTOR.

At a trial in England in 1813, between certain music publishers, as to an alleged piracy of arrangement of the song of "The Old English Gentleman," Cooke was subpœnaed as a witness by one of the parties.

On his cross-examination by Sir James Scarlett for the opposite side, that learned counsel questioned him thus :

"Now, sir you say that the two melodies are the same, but different; now what do you mean by that, sir ?"

- , f

To this Tom promptly answered :

"I said that the notes in the two copies were alike, but with different accent, the one being in common time, the other in sixty-eight time; and consequently the position of the accented notes was different." "Now, pray, sir, don't beat about the bush, considerable temper, and that I do not always | but explain to the jury, who are supposed to you call accent."

Cooke : Accent in music is a certain stress laid upon a particular note in the same manner kind enough to give me a sort of testimonial to as you would a stress upon any given word, this effect, so that I could show it to any other for the purpose of being better understood .-" Buggies, -Lumber wagons, young lady I might want to go with.
