farm and Jouschold.

The most common kind of colic in horses is known as the wind colic. This arises from fermentation of the food in the stomach, instead of the healthy digestion. If a horse is brought in tired and is fed immediately, and fills his stomach. there may not be sufficient gastric juice to perform its office. The food will then ferment. Soon the horse will bloat; the breathing becomes hard, with frothing at the mouth. This may not be confounded with the hard breathing in lung fever, since, in the latter, there is no bloating. The passage of the stomach and bowels become clogged with the masses of undigested food, the gas arising from the fermentation cannot pass out of the stomach diaphram forward so that the lungs cannot expand, the breath becomes short and the rapid breathing will shortly induce frothing. If the trouble reaches this stage, the horse will rarely live more than an hour. In this disease, time is of the greatest value. As soon as you see your horse is bloating give something to stop the fermentation. For this, a heaping teaspoonful of saleratus is the best thing. Spirits of hartshorn in a dose of half an ounce, very much diluted, is good. If now you have checked the fermentation for five minutes, the next thing is to make the gass pass off. To do this, give warm water injections freely, injecting all the animal will hold, if it is a painful. Turn the horse's head down hill, and use a small force pump, if you have one. or if not use a piece of rubber tube which should be inserted as far as it will go with ease, and the end of the tube may then be turned up and a tuunel put in, into which turn warm water. After you have put all the horse will hold, turn him about and let it pass away, and repeat the operation till the bowels become free, and the gas passes off. Meantime, another hand should be preparing a dose of physic, which should be from one-half or three-fourths of an ounce of aloes. This, if put into water by itself, will not dissolve, but, if put into a pint of warm of saleratus has been dissolved, the aloes will dissolve, and the saleratus will be used as an anti-dispeptic to stop the fermentation; to this can be added some molasses to make it more palatable.

Should the animal seem in much pain, give two ounces of laudanum or an ounce of ether, or half an ounce of chloroform. Should the physic not operate in an hour, or half an hour, if it is a very severe case, repeat the dose, keeping up the injections during the time.

If there is a stricture from kinking of Aconite is sometimes given to cure colic, but it was of ne value; nor is salt, or vinegar, or both, of use. Chalk and vinegar, which are sometimes given the chalk first and then the vinegar, will slone produce colic, and should never be given, as the effervescence may give pressure sufficient to burst the bowels. In no event take out the animal and run or trot him about, nor rub his belly with a chestnut rail. The course sometimes adopted of laying the horse on his side, and getting a heavy man with thick boots to walk across him, back and forth, is also useless and cruel in the extreme. If the horse can be saved it will be by the use of injections and physic.—Dr. Cressy

Keep Sheep.

Sheep raising is increasing all over the country. Farmers are begining to and there is nothing more comfortable, in a general sense, than a good flock of sheep. They require a very small outlay, when once a flock is started, and yet the product of wool, meat and manure is of very considerable importance. To avoid the principle objection to sheep raising by many farmers—the dogs, a corral should be constructed near the barn or in the most convenient point on the farm, where the flock should be herded nightly during the year, and thus be protected against animals—the sheep dogs—who seldom make their attacks by day, and when they do they can be readily shot.

The Young Kolks.

A Country School.

When I was a little girl, I went to a little school, which was kept by a very little lady, in a very little house. The little lady herself lived in another little house, which was divided from the little school-house only by a little garden. I did not know then how little the houses; and the garden, and my school-teacher were. Miss Caroline seemed large and powerful to me; and as for her ferule, it looked bigger to me than the big trees of California looked when I saw them a lew years ago. But when I went back, a grown woman, to my old home, and walked past Miss Caroline's cottage and the little old school-house I hardly could believe my eyes, everything was so tiny; and I could have picked Miss Caroline up under my arm.

The School house had been a shoe maker's shop once and some of the shoemaker's furniture had been left in it. There was a bench on which he used to sit and work; this had a little open box which becomes distended, and presses the at one end, where he used to keep his tools; this bench stood in the middle of the room, in front of Miss Caroline's desk, and all the classes sat on it to recite their lessons. The end which had the open box on it was called the "head" of the class. Once I kept up "at the head," in spelling, a whole week, and I grew so used to having hold of the edge of the box, and slipping my fingers back and forth on it, that when I lost my place, and had a boy or girl on my left side, I had hard work not to keep all the time taking hold of their arms, instead of the box. There used to be also a little drawer uuder the bench, at this end; but Miss Caroline had taken off, after she found out that it was there Ned Spofford hid the "spit-balls" he used to fire up and down all the classes he recited in. Oh, what a bad boy Ned Spofford was! But how we all did like him! Even Miss Caroline herself, I think, liked him better than any other scholar in all the school; and yet he gave her twice as much trouble as all the other scholars put together. But he was so good natured and affectionate that nobody could help loving him, in spite of his mischief. He never resisted nor struggled when she had to punish him. I really think he got feruled as often as once a week; but he used to hold out his hand the minute she told him to, and look strait into her eyes while water in which a heaping tablespoonful she struck him. Some times he would bite his lips, and the tears would come into his eyes, but he never cried, nor begged off, as the rest of us did. He was as brave as mischievous. Even when he had to sit on the dunce-stool for twenty minutes with his mouth wide open and a piece of corn-cob set firmly between his teeth, he never cried. This was Miss Caroline's worst punishment. I think if she herself had tried it once, to see how much it hurt, she never would have had the heart to inflict it on us. At first, when she wedged in the piece of cob, you the bowels there will be no help. The felt like laughing that anybody should lecturer had known a horse to die in | think such a thing as that could be much thirty minutes, in spite of all efforts of a punishment; but pretty soon your jaws began to ache, and then, the pain reached up into the back of your head. and into your ears, and it became real torture; there was not a single boy in school that could bear it without the tears streaming down his cheeks, except Ned Spofford. Miss Caroline very rarely did it to girls; I think no one but Sarah Kellogg and I ever had it. We were the worst girls in school; we two and Ned Spofford were the three black sheep in Miss Caroline's flock.—St. Nicholas

Chimney-Swallows and Their Nests.

The chimney-swallow is another wellknown bird, which builds its nest inside unused chimneys. The nest of this bird is comewhat like that of the barn-swallow in shape, but is made of small sticks instead of mud. These sticks, like the little balls of mud, are fastened together by means of a glue-like substance which is formed in the mouth of the bird; for almost all the birds which belong to the swallow family are able to secrete this glue, and make use of it in building their

DR. SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP.—Sea weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills. These medicines have undoubtedly performed more cures of consumption than any other remedy known to the American public. They are compounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain nothing which can be injurious to the human constitution. Other remedies advertised as cures for consumption, probably contain opium, which is a somewhat dangerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients, it must do great injury; for its tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which of course, must make a cure impossible.-Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is warranted not to contain a particle of opium; it is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expel all the di seased matter from the body. These are the only means by which consumption can be cured, and as Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills are the only medicines which operate in this way, it is obvious they are the only genuine cures for Pul-monary Consumption. Each bottle of this invaluable medicine is accompanied by full descriptions. Dr. Schenck is professionally at his principal office, corner Sixth and Arch streets.
