tion of agriculture was formed, about forty years ago. There it was the ball was first put in motion, whose powerful impetus has spread far and wide. Other societies have of Goods, comprising a greater variety than is usince been formed, the fruits of whose united ally kept in a country store, bought exclusively or labors we this day enjoy. They each had the question been they do will they do where societies have been best attended to, there doubts and opposition have nominally their obstacles and oppositions to meet and ceased, because there, also, their benefits are more fully appreciated.

The age of invention and improvement is not past; neither are the full knowledge of our own soil, the properties it possesses, and the best methods of tillage, yet fully attained. Since I came among you many important changes have been made, to great advantage in cultivation. Our soil possesses many properties peculiar to itself, the value of these and the best methods of turning them to good account, can only be tested by experiment. Here then is ample room for us all to investigate and try expedients. To this end our society was formed, and not for selfish or sinister purposes. It is a farmer's institute, designed for the care and management of farmers; and the farmers generally are invited to come forward, and for their own interest, take it into their hands, and thus secure to the public, that benefit which the institution was designed to produce. Accept of these hasty hints from one who honestly believes, that the individual interest of all is with the society, and that you can not better subserve that interest, than to become 'S. A. HE subscriber offers, lots for sale in the town ship of Great Bend in the village of Great-rille, and directly opposite the village of Great Bend, located on the Depot of the New York, and Erie railroad, and the Great Bend and Cochecton Turnpike, in the valley of the Susquehama river. The railroad crossing the said turnpike, thence running in a curved line nearly parallel with the same at the distance of a few hundred feet, with the grounds gradually rising above rullroad and turnpike, overlooking the river and the beautiful valley, compared with its healthy climate, renders it a most desirable location for building purposes.

The depot ground of the railroad company being located in the centre of a rich and extensive agricultural district, surrounding it on every side with its many roads centering in, and all other advanta-ges combined, afford every advantage to a basiness

An Extensive Water Power can be brought from the Susquehanna river, adjoining the depot grounds of the suid rail road, suficient for the erection of all manufacturing estabnents, or any machinery required.
