

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT

Management of Farms

A writer in the Southern Planter gives the following instructions in regard to the management of the farm. It is worthy of a careful perusal.

As it regards the management of farms, even among practical men, there exists a diversity of opinion. Some persons contend that grazing is, often judicious; others, as "Fossil Shells" in your Sept. No., says, "Don't graze your land either winter or summer." Some farmers believe that it is better to manure a small quantity of land well; others, to extend it over a larger surface. Some, like Dr. Baldwin, advocate shade to renovate worn out soils; and others care not for the shade so they obtain the substance. Now some of these opinions are right, but determine which to prefer at the time, with all the attending circumstances.

To graze arable land during the whole period it is not in cultivation is certainly to impoverish it; but judicious grazing is frequently necessary and advantageous; for instance, a farmer has a tract of high land which he wishes to improve, but is thickly set in assasin bushes, running briars, and other pests. Now I do contend that hard grazing with both cattle and sheep, for at least three years, or until these pests are exterminated, is the most rational system; for if the land be cultivated before they are all destroyed, they spring up with the crop, which is injured; and when the field is again to be cultivated shrubbing and grubbing have to be resorted to, and a sufficiency of labor expended to pay nearly for the land. On rich and I think it also advisable to graze clover the first year, as this will keep down the weeds and prevent their destroying the young clover. On spongy land, also, particularly such as has on it a heavy coat of vegetable matter, trampling the land by cattle is certainly an advantageous practice; but to graze clover of the second year, or land almost destitute of vegetable matter, if free from the pests above mentioned, ought not in my opinion, to have an advocate.

Manuring heavily a small space, in preference to extending the manure over a larger surface, is perhaps the better plan for corn and tobacco; but if for top dressing of wheat or to secure a good stand of clover, covering a greater breadth of land is more desirable. As to Dr. Baldwin's theory, that shade will enrich lands more than stable manure, it is unnecessary now to notice, as I have sent you a short essay on the subject.

Economise Your Fodder

It is true that the hay harvest, the present season, has been an abundant one. Farmers are rejoicing in the fullness of their granaries, yet economy must superintend the labor of feeding or even amid our affluence we shall feel the pinching hand of want. Every article of nutriment contained in the ton, should be made available. No "orbs" must be mouldering in the manger; no refuse be permitted to accumulate in the barn. Whatever has grown and been stored away for use must be turned to profit. To accomplish this, successfully, root and straw cutters are indispensable assistants. By their aid a very great saving may be effected, and much that would be otherwise totally lost, or appropriated in such a way as to produce less than its weight, or one-fourth its legitimate results, is made to contribute richly in the production of a valuable and important end. Steaming also, when practicable, without involving an expenditure altogether disproportionate to the contemplated advantages cannot be too highly recommended, or too imperatively urged. Few of the improvements of which the present age can so justly boast, has conceded more decidedly to agricultural progress and prosperity, or can promise more important ulterior results. We would therefore recommend to every one the introduction of a steaming apparatus among the laboring and food-economising "fixtures" of his establishment, which, without them, must ever be incomplete. -Hallock Gazette.

Look to Your Stables

Cold weather has come, and it should be collected that with warm and comfortable stables your cattle may be wintered well with less food than they will require if your stables are cold and uncomfortable. "The way to summer your cattle well, is to winter them well; and half the secret of good wintering is to keep them warm." Animal heat is generated in proportion to the abundance and excellence of their food. Exposure to the cold air withdraws heat rapidly, and of course makes more food necessary to re-supply it, just as an open door makes it necessary to have more wood in the stove. If your stock run down in the winter, and come out in the spring and feeble all the summer will not fully repay you again. A little time and money may be profitably expended in fitting your stalls and stables, and rendering them suitable for the winter accommodation of your cattle. -Me. Farmer.

Apples as Food

The importance of apples, as food, remarks the American Agriculturist, has not hitherto been sufficiently estimated in this country nor understood. Besides contributing a large proportion of sugar, mucilage and other nutritive matter, in the form of food, they contain such a fine combination of vegetable acids, extractive substances, and aromatic principles, with the nutritive matter, as act powerfully in the capacity of refrigerative, tonic, and anti-septic; and when freely used at the season of ripeness, by rural owners and others, they prevent debility, loosen digestion, correct the putrefactive tendencies of nitrogenous food, avert scurvy, and probably maintain and strengthen the powers of productive labor. The operators of Cornwall in England, consider ripe apples nearly as nourishing as bread, and more so than potatoes. In the year 1801, a year of scarcity, apples, instead of being converted into cider, were sold to the poor; and the laborers asserted that they could stand their work on baked apples without meat; whereas a potato diet required either meat or fish.

The French and Germans use apples extensively; indeed, it is rare that they sit down, in the rural districts, without them in some shape or other, even at the first tables. The laborers and mechanics depend on them, and frequently dine on sliced apples and bread. Stewed with rice, red cabbage and carrots, or by themselves, with a little sugar and milk, they make both a pleasant and nutritious dish.

EFFECT OF RAILROADS ON THE MARKET.—Whether the railroads leading into New-York have had a tendency to cheapen produce in the city, we cannot say; but certain it is, they have greatly enhanced the price at the farmer's door. We were struck with this at Binghamton the other day. The price of poultry has more than doubled. Butter is within two cents of the weekly average in New-York. Venison used to be a common dish upon the tables of the quiet villagers of that once inland town; but now they cannot afford to pay the two shillings a pound that the city epicure will pay in New-York, where it can be sent in the morning, and served up for supper the same day. -Am. Agriculturist.

EFFECT OF THE N. Y. AND ERIE RAILROAD ON THE BUTTER AND POULTRY MARKET.—Fifty thousand dollars worth of Butter has been shipped on one boat from Newburg, at one time; while twenty to thirty thousand dollars worth, as common freight, used to be frequent before the New York and Erie Railroad was completed. This road somewhat lessened the freighting business of Newburg, but added immense amounts to the New York market of almost everything that is eatable. A few years ago, turkeys, ducks, and chickens were hawked about the streets of Oswego, begging for buyers. But now, if you want an article of this kind, you had better snap at the first offer, or it is off for New York. And eggs are eggs for a surety there now. Railroads are wonderful revolutionizers. -Id.

TO PREVENT HORSES RUNNING OFF.—When the Icelanders ride two or more together on horseback, and wish to dismount and leave their horses for any length of time, they tie the head of one horse to the tail of the other, and the head of the second to the tail of the former. In this reversed condition they can make no progress and if they move at all they can only go in a circle.

TRICKS OF QUACKS.

There is a Saraweekee or a different town called S. P. Townsend's Saraparilla. It is advertised as the ORIGINAL, GENUINE, and so on. This Townsend is no doctor, and never was. He is a former worker on railroads, and never will be known as a doctor. He says he has attended two medical schools, and practiced for fifteen years. Now the truth is, he never practiced medicine. He looks like the character and variety of the man, I wish most sincerely, he had never made those statements of himself or others. When will men learn to be honest and truthful in all their dealings and intercourse with their fellow men? He applied to one East Clay to assist him in manufacturing his mixture, stating the large sums he would make, as an inducement to letting him in all possible ways, in order to impress the public with the belief that the Old Doctor's Saraparilla was not a quack. East Clay, a man of one single solitary proof of this. His statements of Thompson, Stillman & Co. are nothing but a series of falsehoods, simply made to deceive the public, and keep them in the dark in regard to his earnings, farming, etc. This S. P. Townsend says he will give his original recipe for a week. I will give him $500 if he does not give one single solitary proof of this.
