History of Agriculture.

Agriculture engaged the attention of the mans, theoretically as well as practically. war. In the early days of the republic r greatest men employed themselves alnately in the one and the other. Cincinus was called from the plow to fill the of-

of dictator. Among the Romans the ox was the prinbeast of burden; and there are many ections for breeding working and feeding animal, to be found in the workings of y, Cato, and others. Bees were also in high estimation among the Romans, directions for their management may found among the writers above mention-

With regard to the implements of husdry used by the Romans, we cannot very definitely; but it is certain they plows of some sort both with mould ds and colters and without them. This gave every man a nction and rank according to the quanof land he occupied. Nothing contrid more to give an importance to agriaral pursuits than the introduction of system, which gave the tenant, that culed the soil, as well as the landlord who ed the land, political privileges that enjoyed by no other member of the

he great practical truth and characterof the present age is, that great public vements were carried out by means of tary association. This principle-the le of voluntary association-of bringnds together to act upon each other, is eat principle and truth of the age. Its to be sure; was seen centuries ago in d world. It was to be traced in the esarther extended in the professional asfons of Europe at a subsequent period. has been long—both in the old cound'in this-before the idea was brought r upon agriculture and the tillage of the J. Every man al a great part of whatever knowledge ht possess by conversation and comtion with others. Books indeed might ething in this respect, but nothing in ison with free communication. If we deduct from the aggregate of each knowledge, whatever he had learned amunication and conversation with his man, very little would be left, and tle not worth much at best. It was irse with each other that made men and active, and enterprising; and e if there should not be at any annubition of an agricultural association, a me pair of steers, or a likely cow in the country, still if there were the men ed together in social intercourse then aibition would be productive of much -Daniel Webster's Speech at the Nor-

Into this pipe at its entrance, were introduced corn cobs as fuel, and it was truly surprising how few of these were necessary to raise the water to the boiling point, the draught, being exceedingly great, and the water having free access to the pipe.

Small Potatoes. Some years ago a gentleman visiting a farmer in Tolland, Connecticut, took from his pocket a small potato, which somehow had got in there at home. It was thrown out with a smile, and the farmer taking it in his hand to look at it, a curious little boy of twelve, at his elbow asked what it was. "O, nothing but a potato my boy. Take and plant it and you shall have all you can raise from it till you are free." The lad took it and the farmer thought no more about it at that time. The boy however, not despising small potatoes, carefully divided it into as many pieces as he could find eves and put them into the ground.-The product was carefully put aside in the fall, and planted in spring, and so on until the fourth year the yield being good, and the actual product was four hundred bushels.-The farmer, seeing the prospect that the potato field would in another year cover his whole farm, asked to be released from his

With the same calculation, prudence, and industry, how many who are disposed to regard the trifling things on which fortunes are built, as too small potatoes to receive their attention would have been independent in circumstances, if they had husbanded small advantages. Small potatoes should not be despised, even though there be at first but few in a hill.

Any person cast boil or stew the root till they get a dark colored floud, which is more from the coloring matter in the root than from anything eise; they kan then strain this insignid or vapid liquid, sweeten with sour molasses, and then call it "SARAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYRUP."

But such is not the strained known as the inspind or vapin liquid, assessed with sour molasses, and then call it "SARSAPARILLA EXTRACT or SYSUP." But such is not the article known as the GENUINE OLD DR JACOB TO WNSEND'S SARSAPARILLA.

This is so prepared that all the inert properties of the Sarsaparilla root are first removed, everything capable of becoming acid or fermentation in sextracted and rejected; then every particle for medical virtue is secured in a pure and concentrated form; and thus it is rendered incapable of losing any of its valuable and feeding properties. Prepared in this way, it is made the measupowerful agant in the Curre of annuarmerable Diseases.

Hence the reason why we hear dommendations on every ride in its favor by men, somen, and children. We find it doing wonders in the cure of GONSUMPTION. DYSPEPSIA, and LIVER-COMPLAINT, and in RHEUMATISM, SCROFULA, PILES, COSTIVEMESS, all CUTANE.

As S. P. Townsend is not doctor, and never was, is no chemist, no pharmaceulitist, knows no more of medicine or diseases flam any other common, macinalitic suppressed man, what guarantee can the public bave that they are receiving a genuine scientific incidents, containing all the virtues of the articles used in preparing it and which are incabable of changes which might report them the aGENTS of Disease instead of health? How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture on cooking comparatively of medicine or disease? It requires a petron of some experience, to cook and serve my even a common decent mealt. How much more important is it that the persons who manufacture medicate the defining virtues, also an extensive knowledge of the various diseases which affect the human system, and how of adapt remedies to these diseases?
