Fugitve Blaves. For several days there have been among us several persons from the South, says the Wilkesbarre Advocate, in quest of Fugitive Slaves. Figure Carev. Esq. the Commissioner under the Fugitive Slave Law, kas, with his usual energy and promptness, rendered the pursuers every assists nee in his ness rendered the pursuers every assists nee in his ness rendered the pursuers. ness, rendered the products are rely assists age in his power. But as yet his efforts have not been successful. At one time it was said about 200 Blacks cessful. At one same at way said about 200 blacks were congregated together, and part of them armwere congregated together, and part of them armed. A military company was called out by the Commissioner. They paraded, making a fine appearance, and marched to the appointed place—Their object was to protect the officer in the execution of the Commissioner's write. Finding no colored men die mititary returned and were dis-

At another time some patriotic (f) young men readily responded to the call of an officer appointed by the Commissioner, and formed a posse to aid in searching for Fugitive Slaves. They repaired to the appointed place, but found no men, only a few women, most of whom were without the neans of defence, except two or three who had a means of defence, except two or three who had a few butcher knives and a pot or two of hot water neither of which were used. In saying that they had no means of defence we do not mean to say they had no arms, for they had those natural appendages. But one of them we understand, offered to use them, and she, insulting creature, only proposed to use them in a most endearing mainer, as she insolently addressed one of the party. The roung gentlemen were all resolute, and made the necessary search without molestation, and without anding a Fugitive. We do not learn that any white person has shown the slightest disposition to make forcible resistance to the execution of the law. As near as we can learn the great mass of the people have to wish to interfere in any way, leaving pursuers to arrest fugives, while a few have readily shown a willinguess to aid in making arrests.

We learn that two Southern men drove down to hill they were ascending. The black thus made his escape. The pursuers mounted their own whywagon, and thus the black made good his retreat to the house of Mr. Harvey. As he entered the two Southern men approached the house hastily, Truesdell's excellent Livery establishment with cocked pistols in hand. The black, we underat the time, fastened the doors. He then fied to his bed room, where he armed himself with two

The family, as might be supposed, were greatly terrified at this display of fire arms, and scracely in their affright knew what they could or ought to do. Mr. Harvey who had occasion to go to his store near by, was sent for by the men who made some demand of him, which, perhaps it was not in his power to comply with. He had learned that the black had said he would not be taken—that he ras, armed, and that his feelings were worked up into a state of perhaps, fearful desperation. The pursuers being so armed, the family greatly alarmed, Mr. Harvey assured them he would make no resistance, nor aid to prevent their arresting the black, but that he could not tolerate the thoit of a murder being committed in his house. Their very appearance with cocked pistols was alarming. The men returned to town without the black, and made preparations to prosecute Mr. Harvey at Williamsport what for, we know not, as we understand Mr. Harvey took no part in the movement -only declined putting himself in the way of cocked pistols. Afterwards learning that the slave was valued at six hundred dollars—and Mr. Har ver not knowing whither he had gone, with a most commendable spirit of philanthropy, offered to give the men $600, if they would manumit the slave This they refered to take preferring to pursue Mr. TOTICE is hereby given that Joshua Stage has Harvey with the law.
