A machinery might as well do it by hiring men nighte perform the whole labor instead of using steam engine as for the farmer at this day to refuse the lights of science as applied to agricult-art. We have visited many farms during the last three years, and advised modes of manuring, culthe de based on the chemical constituents of the will, and we venture to assert that in every case improved profits of any two acres would have and our whole charge for services.

We last year hired a piece of ground in our gubaniod, weich was worn out and refused Last winter we made an analsis of the soil found it short of chlorine, phosphate of lime notice, and ammonical matter. We manured it in the spring with a compost costing one dolar and thirty-one cents per acre. The chlorine, and soda were supplied with common salt; the phosphate of lime, potash and ammonical matter, by Peruvian guano; and the volatile matter of the compost retained by the use of charcoal dust and Prester of Paris. We have now a crop of corn standing on this land which yield certainly more than fifty bushels of shelled corn per acre, and after measuring we hope to be able to report a much larger crop, and that, too, without the proper preparation of the ground by sub-soil plowing, &c., as on our own farm.

Nutrition of the Various Grains.

Wheat is one of the most important of all crops The grain contains from fifty to seventy per cent. of statch; from 10 to 20 per cent of gluten, and from 3 to 5 per cent of fatty matter. The poportion of gluten is said to be largest in the grain of warm countiles. It is a singular fact, that in all the seed of wheat and other grains, the principal part of the oil lies near or in the skin, as also does a large portion of the gluten. The bran owes to er much they may be "crucked up." The best fine flour contains about sevouts pounds of starth to each hundred. The residue of one hundred pounds, consists of ten or twelve pounds of gluten, six or eight pounds of suand gum, and ten or fourteen pounds of water and a little oil.

PULVERIZING THE SOIL -It is belived, and, indeed the fact has already been abundantly demonstrated, that the finer the soil is, the mose fertile is willibe.
