

The Editor's Department.

What flower most resembles a bull's mouth? A cow's lip.

An editor out West has married a girl named Church; he says he has enjoyed more happiness since he joined the Church than he ever did in his life before.

What's the use of an oxen? Oh, I don't know! It gives the Sun time for reflection.

Foreigners coming to this country from England and Ireland, are much puzzled by the frogs which they find here; and their croaking makes them look around with amazement. The frog is, indeed, a peculiar animal and his music is much admired by those who get used to it.

Music is like chewing tobacco—it requires some practice to acquire a taste for it; especially the music of a frog.

Some folks are easily glorified—We once knew a man who became so elated because he was elected fourth corporal in a military company, that he went straight home and put a silver plate on his door. Ollapod, in speaking of this kind of people, makes mention of one Sabine, who was so overjoyed the first time he saw his name in the list of letters published by the postmaster, that he called his friends together, and put 'em through on woodcock and champagne.

A Yankee who went over to the mother country some time ago, was asked on his return how he liked Great Britain?—"Well," he said, "England was a very nice country, exceedingly fertile, well cultivated, very populous and very wealthy; but said the Yankee, "I never liked to take a morning walk after breakfast, because the country is so small; that I was always afraid of walking off the edge."

This same chap settled somewhere in the west, at a time when there was about one inhabitant to the hundred square miles, and for a while got along quite comfortably. One night a traveller stopped at his log cabin, and in the course of a friendly chat remarked that he had stopped the night before at a new settler's twenty miles off. "What!" said his host, "getting so close as that!" I'll pull up stakes," if the neighbors are crowding in that way, we shan't be able to keep a fowl, directly!"

A Bad Joke—On Saturday last the publishers of the Evening Dispatch, at St. Louis, posted upon their bulletin board, in flaming capitals, the news of the assassination of Louis Napoleon, which they found in a Boston paper, received by due course of mail. The announcement caused a great excitement for a short time, and one very excitable individual named Kayer, as soon as he had seen the bulletin, rushed into Wyman's Hall, in which a great crowd had assembled to hear a speech from Kossuth, and forcing his way to the rostrum, proclaimed the death of the French usurper. The words were hardly spoken before everybody in the vast hall, men and women, rose to their feet and joined in one loud, deafening terrific shout. Hats were thrown up, handkerchiefs waved, and the most extravagant confusion continued to prevail for several minutes. When comparative order had been restored the hoax was discovered and announced, and not a few undergarments were seen immediately to relax into an unusual dejection.—Cincinnati Gazette.

Chinese Artist on Female Beauty. Lum-qua is called by Europeans the Six-Thomas Lawrence of China; and he well deserves this proud distinction, as the coloring of this artist's oil paintings is exceedingly fine, although his ideas of female beauty differ materially from our own. In the course of conversation we asked his opinion of an English belle then at Canton, and the reply was completely characteristic of a Chinaman's ideas of female beauty: "Her face is too round, she has color in her cheeks, her eyes are too blue, too large; she's too tall, too plump, y' yaw; her face talks (meaning her countenance was expressive), and she has feet so large that she can walk on them." In Lum-qua's atelier, we saw many portraits, both of Europeans and Chinese, many of which were excellent likenesses, and although deficient in light and shade, were executed in a most masterly manner.—China and the Chinese.

The Great Affair.—The caricaturing of Louis Napoleon, during the carnival at Ghent, is thus described:—It appears that among the other absurdities in which the good people of that town indulged, was a mask-making contest. These masks, and dressed so as to represent, in a manner not to be mistaken, the august President of the French Republic. The figure was decorated with an immense false nose such as the Journal pour Rire has to be a facsimile of the proboscis of the "nephew of his uncle," and it carried in its hand a huge cat-o'-nine tails, with which it belabored, from time to time the backs of a set of puppets, who were evidently mute, because they had padlocks on their mouths, and who were decked out in the new costume of the senatorial councillors of state. To the ridicule made upon his subject, the Belgian government has replied that it is a parody, of which it is indignantly disapproved, should have been exhibited; and, as a satisfaction to the President, it offered to dismiss the Commissioners of Police on duty on the occasion, who ought to have prevented it. The French Government refuses to accept the sacrifice of the unfortunate commissary as sufficient satisfaction, and insists that the Governor of the Province should be offered up as a holocaust, who it appears from the report of the French spies who were present on the occasion, not only witnessed the procession from the balcony of his residence, but had indulged himself with a hearty laugh on the occasion. Here the affair rests for the present.

THE ROAD TO WEALTH.

WHAT is there that guarantees to us a competency more surely, more abundantly, than health and vigor of youth, nothing; then, than his, how shall that be obtained and secured? If we have a Cough, Cold, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Pleurisy, Indisposition or hoarseness, or any other affection of the Lungs or Chest, you will find in DR. THORP'S COMPOUND SYRUP OF BLOOD ROOT, a sure and safe remedy, or if your children are afflicted with Croup or Whooping Cough, no better remedy can be found. Thousands have been relieved with it, and cardinals of its curative powers, now in my possession, places its cure a doubt, the greatest remedy of the age, for any affection of the Lungs. The powers of Blood Root remedy has long been known, but its harsh action alone has kept it somewhat out of general favor, but I flatter myself that the above combination is perfect, and that its use will secure friends wherever it is offered to an enlarged patient.

DYSPEPSIA.

THE GREAT BRITISH QUINQUINA AND BLACKWOOD'S MAGNAN. Important reduction in the rates of postage. Leonard Scott & Co. CONTINUE to publish the following British Periodicals: The London Quarterly Review (Conservative); The Edinburgh Review (Whig); The North British Review (Free Church); The Westminster Review (Liberal); and Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine (Tory). These receipts have not been in successful operation in this country for many years, and our standing the competition of similar cheap and from American Periodicals and Magazines and from those of foreign periodicals. This is not only clearly shown by the estimation in which they are held by the intelligent, but also by the fact that a guarantee that they are excellent, and a firm basis, and will be continued without intermission. Although these works are distinguished by the political character indicated, yet a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary character, and the serial works of the leading authors, that give them their chief value, and in that they stand as the most valuable of the kind. Blackwood, still under the masterly guidance of Christopher North, maintains its celebrity, and is, at this time, unusually attractive, by the serial works of the leading authors, and the columns both in Great Britain and the United States. Such works as "The Captivity" and "My Mother," (both by Bulwer), "My Prisoner," "The Novels," "The Captivity," and "The Captivity," which numerous times have been reprinted by the leading publishers in this country, have been reprinted by Blackwood, after it has been reprinted by Messrs. Scott & Co. in London. It is the opinion of those who have read the serial works of the leading authors, that these Magazines may always be regarded as the best reading of those fascinating tales.
