A Fugitive Slave Case. made public, because the peculiarities of the case prevented the pursuit of the fugitive from taking the customary course. But we can vouch for the truth of the statement we asted party; and one of great respectability. A few weeks since, a Southern gentleman arrived in the city, and made known to a confidential friend, that he had come in pursuit, of a runaway slave, his own property, and from the fact of the slave being a beautiful young woman, nearly white, he thought it advisable not to attempt to recover her by making application to any quarter, where the factof his pursuit would be likely to be made known to the public, as his object might thereby be frustrated. His friend advised him, therefore, to offer a reward of two hundred dollars, to some intelligent police officer, for the arrest of the fugitive, and trust to his rudence and discretion. The advice was taken; and after a while a clue was got to the whereabouts of the beautiful fugitive, but before she could be arrested she was "up and gone, the graceless girl," and away down east, where the sun rises, and beyond the reach of her legal proprietor.

There was nothing unusual or marvellous in all this, but it was discovered during the time that the search was being made, that the "fair she" was not only the legal propertr of the pursuer, but his natural also; she was, in fact his own daughter, and had re-caped from the man to whom her father and owner had hired her. Since her arrival in this city, she had captivated the heart of a white gentleman, who did not suspect her erigin, and been "woo'd and wedded and " and her husband, having by some means or other got scent of the danger, instead of playing the part of linkle to his Yarico, had the manliness to bear her off to a place of

These are the essential facts of this fucitive slave case, which are sufficiently romantic and strange to be the figment of a lively magination. But that fact is stranger than fiction has became a truism; and nothing is now disbelieved on account of its strangeness .- New York Sunday Courier.

How Scott BECAME A SOLDIER -In the summer of 1807 occurred the wauton attack of the British frigate Leopard upon the Chesapeake, and the seizure and imprisonment of her crew, upon the allegation that they were British subjects. This outrage excited a violent resentment throughout the country. Young Scott shared ardently in the indignation of his countrymen, and immediately joined a volunteer corps raised in Petersburg, and marched with them down to Lynnhaven Bay, where they took up their station, in exrectation of a British descent upon the coast. lut this little cloud of war blew over, the rolunteers were called home, and Scott, retarned to the practice of his profession. He was soon to leave it forever, for Providence had marked for him a wide and glorious career. Our difficulties with England thickened. It became clear that a war was inevi-Congress passed a bill to raise an army. Scott applied for a commission, and n May, 1808, received from President Jefferson a commission as captain of artillery. Duing the rest of the year he was employed on the recruiting service, and in the study of his new profession of arms. In 1809 he was ordered to Louisiana, and placed under the command of General Wilkinson. For this, officer Scott had no respect. Himself filled with patriotic ardor, and a passionate devotion to his country's honor, he believed Wilkinson to be implicated in Burr's conspiracy. The young soldier, with more boldness than prudence, did not l'esitate to express his sentiments. - The result was that Wilkinson oreferred charges against him that resulted. his suspension from the service for a year. In this punishment he had the sympathy of his brother officers, and was complinented with a public dimner on the occasion of his intence. The interval of suspension was assed by Scott in a systematic and thorough udy of military tactics, and the whole fciof war. At the expiration of the time, reappeared in service with increased lowledge, and superior fitness for the arduand important duties now about to devolve upon him.

"GIVE US YOUR HAND-So DO. I."-Evtroody hereabouts knows George Witheral, the for years has been a working man in the Democratic ranks, and who had done that larly good service. On Monday George met a democratic friend who had just returned from the West, and whose first enquiry was, "Well, George, how's politics ?" George answered. But the usne invalves considerations so vital and momentous to the country, that I would not that the confidence of victory should encourage and sanction disregaid of effort. With the recollectionof 40 and 48 to inspire us with a candidate so noble and a cause so exaltedwith a history to be vindicated, a country to be protected, and a freeddin to be maintained surely the Whigs of Pennsylvania require no further incentive to action & duty. If we did, I would, with the solemnity which becomes the occa-sion, remind you that we are the beirs of the departed Sage of Ashland that he has left to us his cause, his principles, and his fame; that the banner we hear is his banner, and the triumph we seek will be his vindication. When the Douglass was on his way, with the knightly train to Palestine, bearing the heart of Robert Bruce to the Holy Sepurche, he was well high overborne by a desperate ouslangth of the Monish chiralry of idence of its value, furnished by agents gratis. and his fame; that the banner we hear was well nigh overborne by a desperate ouslaught of the Moorish chivalry of Spain. His knights and men at arms gave way beneath the lance and scimetar of the infidel; when the heroic Douglass hurled the sacred urn, containing th heart of Bruce, in the midst of the en my, and crying aloud, "A Brace to the redcue!" rallied his men, swopp the fo before him, and recovered the sagred an inestimable relic. Thus the heart Bruce conquered even in death. A nobl than Bruce has hitherto led us in noble than Bruce has left us rich in possessing his name and his ashes. GENERAL SCOTT AMONG HIS SOLDIERS. General Scott was always a great favorite with the soldiers of the army in Mexico. They had unbounded confidence in his military knowledge and skill, and fully believed what was the real truth, that he restrained himself with great difficulty from more often mingling in the dangers of the strife of arms, purely from and Philadelphia. considerations of duty to the army and his country; a duty which rigorously demanded of him to preserve his person from all unnecessary exposure. Let did every man feel the firmest and most undoubting assurance, that if ever the time should come when it was necessary for the commanding general to lead his troops in person in some dreadful emergency that he would embrace the sion with joyful alacrity, and cheerfully "lead a forlorn hope through a breach spouting with fire." It was this universal conviction that gave perfect confidence to our troops, and formed the corner-stone of our unbroken successes in Mexico, by inspiring the courage and maintaining the spirit of the army up to the highest pitch. United to this feeling of confidence in the commander-in-chief, July 22, 1852. was that of love and affection for his person. The most touching evidence of the attachment of his comrades in arms was given on numerous occasions. WE HAVE HEARD OF HIM OUT Canadian neighbors take some interest in politics on this side of the Lake. A cap-tain of a Canadian vessel trading at this port, inquired of a gentleman a few days since, with whom he was doing some business, as to whom the two parties had nominated for President. He was told the "Democrats" had nominated Pierce.
The next question was—Who is he! SLAYERY IN CALIFORNIA. The question of polluting California with the accursed system of human bondage, is creating considerable discussion in that country. A writer in the Sonora Herald concludes an article thus:

"This eternal struggle for enslaving our fellow men has to me become heartsickening and disgusting.
