

destroying the smell of various substances; thus rendering it a ready sweetener of the breath.

Why does tartar on teeth destroy them? Because it consists of a substance which produces decay and tooth-ache. Crab verjuice diluted with water, will destroy them.

As an Irishman's player, possessed of more wit than money was a few days ago, driven by the hard master, hunger, to commit the high-crime of poisoning, in the neighborhood of Birmingham, and being unluckily detected in the act, was carried forthwith before a bench of magistrates, when the offence was fully proved. The knight of the buckin, however, being called upon for his defence, astonished the learned justices, by adopting "Brutus' speech to the Romans on the death of Caesar" to his case thus:

"Brutus! hunger and epures I fear me for my cause, and be silent that you may hear; believe me for my honor, and have respect for mine honor that you may believe; consume me in your wisdom, and awake your senses that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of this here, to him I say, that a player's love for here is no less than his. It then that friend demand why a player rose against a hero, this is my answer: not that I loved here less but that I loved eating more. Had you rather that I were living and I did starve, than that I were dead, that I might live a jolly fellow? As this here was a pretty play for him, as he was nimble, I rejoice at it, as he was plump, I honor him; but as he was catable, I slow him."

Here the gravity of the court was obliged to give away; prosecutors, spectators and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

THE MAMMOTH CAVE.—N. P. Willis has been exploring the mysteries of this vast cavern, and in a letter to the Home Journal thus speculates on its origin and antiquity:—"That the mammoth cave is an antiquity of the world before the flood—a city of giants which an earthquake swallowed, and which a chance rock of rocks has protected from being effaced by the deluge and by the wear of the elements for subsequent ages—is one of the fancies which this strange phenomena forces upon the mind. All is so architectural, so neat, so vast, underground cavity, raw and dirty, but a succession of halls, domes and corridors, streets, avenues and arches, all and all, burst into laughter at the ready wit displayed by the "poor actor." The information was withdrawn and the player was suffered to go "unwhipt of justice."

The Susquehanna Register.

H. H. FRAZIER, EDITOR.

MONTROSE, PENN'A.

Friday Morning, August 20, 1852.

WHIG NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT,
GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT,
OF NEW JERSEY.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM A. GRAHAM,
OF NORTH-CAROLINA.

FOR JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
JOSEPH BUFFINGTON,
OF ARMINGSTOWN.

FOR CANAL COMMISSIONER,
JACOB HOFFMAN,
OF BERKE COUNTY.

FOR SENATORIAL ELECTORS,
A. E. BROWN, JAMES POLLOCK,
REPRESENTATIVE.

1. WILLIAM F. HUGHES, 14. JAMES H. CAMPBELL,
2. JAMES TRIGGARD, 15. JAMES D. PATYON,
3. JOHN W. STROUD, 16. JAMES K. DAVENPORT,
4. JOHN P. YERKES, 17. DR. JNO. McCLELLAN,
5. SPENCER McILVAINE, 18. RALPH DEANE,
6. JAMES W. FULLER, 19. JOHN LEUNG,
7. JAMES PETERSON, 20. ALBERT B. BARNSTON,
8. JOHN SHEPHERD, 21. THOMAS J. LOHMEYER,
9. JACOB MARSHALL, 22. LEWIS L. LOHN,
10. CHARLES P. WALLER, 23. CHRISTIAN MEYER,
11. DAVID HAYES, 24. DANIEL B. BATES,
12. M. C. MERRICK, 25. SAM'L A. FURBER,
13. N. H. MIDDLEBARTY.

The Subscribers to the Register

Are respectfully informed, that my accounts for Subscriptions, Advertising and Job Work are now in the hands of H. H. Frazier, Esq., the present publisher. The propriety of immediately looking up these matters is strongly hinted at.

J. C. MILLER.
Montrose, 6th August, 1852.

A New Feature in Politics.

A new mode of warfare has been commenced against General Scott. It is high time. All those pugnant articles about his being a coward, being flogged by the British, &c., which possessed at least the charm of novelty, at the commencement of the Campaign, are getting threadbare and uninteresting. The Loco-foco ammunition is likely to fail, unless some new invention can be speedily discovered. In this extremity, aid to the "unscrupulous" appears from a most unexpected source. One of the High Priests of "Democracy" is suddenly possessed of the spirit of prophecy. Solemnly the mystic veil of futurity is lifted from before the prophet. Most terrible is the vision that his gifted eyes there behold. Let the friends of freedom mourn, for freedom shall be no more. Let kings and potentates rejoice, for their thrones shall be established forever. The prophetic glance pierces to the dread future, when Scott shall be chosen by the people to rule over them. What sees he there! He speaks:

"A magnificent and monarchial system of imperial grandeur—like that of Louis Napoleon. A diplomatic establishment on a corresponding scale of magnificence—fussy, frothy, and dazzling with stars, embroidery, and medals. Alien and Sedition laws to curb the press and gag the people. Monopolies and corporations for everything. A military body guard for the President, in coats of mail. Consolidated power absorbing all the rights of the States. The funeral of the Supreme Despotism. Titles, feathers, stars and garters—dukes, princes, and ponkies!"

This saith Balaam, the prophet.

"The Voice of a Clergyman."

The nomination of General Scott is thought to have placed the institutions of the South in so great a jeopardy, that the Southern Clergy, or rather that portion of them who have had a call to preach in favor of human bondage, and in opposition to the Higher Law, feel themselves called upon to throw off their apathy and inattention to politics, and come forth, not "to the help of the Lord against the mighty," but vice versa: The Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce, one of these "model clergymen," whose "position in society," to use his own words, "has made it his duty for many years to watch against abolitionism," and who is therefore commended by the Loco-foco press as "having passed a long life in the noblest of all services," has written a letter warning his Southern brethren against supporting Scott. The reverend gentleman is said to have been a Whig in principle hitherto, but he considers Scott's hostility to the "blessed institution" so imminent, that for the first time in his life, he now joins in the strife of politics, determined to do battle in the glorious cause of Pierce and Slavery. That we may not be supposed to misrepresent this "faithful ambassador," we give an extract from his letter as we find it in the Loco-foco paper:

Masses, Grieve and Ours.—As this is the first time in my life that I have ever directly meddled with the Presidential election, I hope no one will accuse me either of officiousness or of a departure from my ministerial duty.

Through a minister of the Gospel of Peace, I am still a citizen of this great Republic, and feel myself deeply interested in its weal. My object in writing is, however, to place two of my difficulties before my countrymen.

As I recognize Gen. Scott, enough has been said by some of our faithful representatives in Congress and his leading men and papers of his party. It only remains for me to say, that I hope no Southern minister will allow himself to be instructed by the Seward Whig party, and that Gen. Scott is the nominee, the only one, who is the measure of the matter, in which he alludes to the great Southern principles, as provided in the Whig platform, is too much evidence of catering. The South may always know, when she hears a man referring calmly and calculatingly to his obligation to the higher law policy, that he is not for the Southern President; nor will any man do who sympathizes with him. Gen. Scott is in no company. But be this as it may we can only act upon the showing. My position in society made it my duty for many years to watch against abolitionism; it was always seeking to encroach upon Southern rights. The result of my observation and experience is, that the South cannot and ought not to trust any man who is an abolitionist. It is an all-controlling evil—a genius that can smile at the desolation of every dear interest of the country, if this one petted notion can be urged on.

—The latest accounts from the Western counties of Ireland, relative to the potato disease, are of an unfavorable tenor; but hopes were entertained that the fallow would be only partial.

—Thomas Francis Meagher last Monday declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States. Every true friend of freedom will welcome the young hero and patriot to all the privileges of American citizenship.

—A correspondent of the Democratic Union says, "If I am well informed, the great majority of the Native American party will sustain Pierce."

—If they do it is probably because of the existence of the Anti-Catholic test in the State where Pierce is the leading spirit, induces the belief that he agrees with them in their opposition to our naturalized citizens. Will our Irish friends support him for the same reason?

—The citizens of Windsor, Vt. have cut a bridge-road part way up Ascutney mountain, and removed obstructions to the rest of the way. The view from the summit of this mountain is surpassingly grand, extending a hundred miles or more, including the Owl's Head on Lake Memphramog, in Canada.

—The London Standard, says, if we are not misinformed, the maritime powers will be invited by England and France to consider the situation of Mexico, with a view to establishing her independence, both financially and politically, so that a barrier may be established to the aggressive spirit of America in the South.

Susquehanna County Agricultural Society.

A meeting of the Society was held on Wednesday evening, Aug. 13. Arrangements were made for the next Annual Fair, to be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 6 and 7. The Plowing Match on the 1st day of the Fair, and the Cattle Show the day following.

The Society have procured a lot of land near the village of Montrose, which measures have been taken to have enclosed with a suitable fence before the time of holding the Fair.

The Premium List has been also much increased. To meet the additional expenditures, it is necessary that the Society should be sustained by the Farmers of the County. It is the only Society which exists, exclusively devoted to their interests, and should be placed by them upon a foundation which would make it one of the permanent institutions of the County. The annual subscription amounts to but Fifty Cents, and it is believed that no Farmer can attend the meetings of Society and not derive a benefit manifold greater than the outlay.

By order of the Society,
SAML' F. CAIRNALL, Sec'y.

A meeting of the Executive Committee will be held on Tuesday evening, Aug. 24. Punctual attendance is requested, as necessary business must be transacted at that time.

Panorama of the Upper Mississippi.

We had the pleasure, last evening, of witnessing this beautiful Panorama. The testimonials of many persons of high character, and the favorable notices of our brethren of the Press, had prepared us for a rich treat, but the exhibition far exceeded our expectations. We seemed placed, as if by enchantment, amid the wild, rich, and ever-varying scenery that borders the great "Father of Waters."

The bold bluff, the forest dark and vast, the sunny vale, the busy village and the farmer's quiet home, the beeching ledge, the broad prairie, and all the wild beauties of the majestic