

An Asylum for Inebriates.
The Editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, a man in every way competent to judge, made a trip to Maine, and has seen the operation of the famous law, and speaks of it after the following manner:

"I have been in Maine, and seen the wonderful Asylum for Inebriates, much larger than the Crystal Palace, being 325 miles long 195 miles wide, and reaches high upwards. It contains within itself vast forests, sweet green fields, beautiful gardens, and fine streams of water. Here the poor inebriate can roam ad libitum, confined by no bars or bolts, and is perfectly cured. It is kept by our Neal Dow—a man of short name and stature, but of great skill in his profession, and indomitable energy. Many New York gentlemen have a drunken habit, would advise him to send him to Maine. And if our Corporation would send thither all who are committed to the Tombs, and support them there a year, they would save much expense and trouble, and receive them back useful citizens. When I was there a few envious spirits were crying out against it, and a New York traveller was surprised because he could not find in it a drop of the drinkard's drink; but I believe it will stand, and hope it will be a model for one in every State in the Union. If this information will be of value to any one who has drunken relations, or to our corporation, I shall be happy to have imparted it."
