Away with the axe, the coarse saw, and all dull tools about your trees, and in their places use those of the best make, and with edge as keen as Damaseus blade.

Every wound that is made should be covered; if the tree is vigorous, and the place small, it will probably grow over, but covering greatly aids the tree in perfecting its outer garment. Paint, clay, gumshellac, and waxed cloth are used for this purpose; the shellac and cloth are perfectly excellent.-The shellac is dissolved in alcohol and applied with a brush ; the cloth is spread with grafting wax made soft, and applied with a brush while warm. A strip of this ticd round a wound or a patch stuck on over it, will greatly facilitate the healing process. Ninety orchards out of every hundred are mutilated in being trimmed. Limbs that ought to be cut off are preserved, and those which ought to be preserved are taken away .--Some are sawed partly off, and allowed to drop, tearing away the wood and the bark from the under-side, and leaving a ragged and ghastly wound, that never heals, but • brings premature decay. This is strong langnage, we are aware, but a careful inspection of most old orchards will confirm it.

There is need of but very little pruning where an orchard has been properly mangeed from the start; no large limbs will ever need to be taken away, unless broken by the winds or injured in some other way. Prune but little, is a good motto. Suffer the shoots

The Light of Nature.

The celebrated Mr. Hume wrote an' essay in the sufficiency of the light of Nature; and the no less celebrated Robertson wrote on the necessity of revelation, and the insufficiency of the light of Nature. Hume came one evening to visit Robertson ; and the evening was spent in conversing on the subject. The friends of both were present; and it is said that Robertson reasoned with nuaccustomed clearness and power. Whether Hume was convinced by his reasoning or be paid. The subscriber has just returned from New York with a beautiful assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, silk and satin Vestings, &c. &c. all of which will be uot, we can't tell ; but at any rate he did not acknowledge it. Hume was very much a gentleman, and as he was about to depart, bowed politely to those in the room, while, as he retired through the door, Robertson took a light to show him the way. Hume was still facing the door. "Oh sir," said he to Robertson, " I find the light of Nature al, ways sufficient;" and he continued, "Pray don't trouble yourself, sir, and so he bowed on. The street door was open, and presently as he bowed along in the entry, he stum bled over something concealed, and pitched down stairs into the street. Robertson ran after him, with a light; and as he held lit over him, whispered softly and cunningly-You had better have a little light from a bove ,friend Hnine." And raising him up, he bade him good night, and returned to his ever ready with her helping hand, sends them point, which we give as confirmatory to our theory. A correspondent of the Prairie Farmer, published at Chicago Illinois, states that he pruned young apple trees four to six feet high, early in spring, and then kept the shoots rubbed off the lower parts of the stems. leaving only suitable heads, on one half the trees. The others were left with their shonts untouched from top to bottom. The result was that those which received no summer pruning were 25 to 40 per cent. larger than the others, even after they were pruned up to heads the following spring. So it may be noticed in older trees that when most of the limbs are cut off in the process of grafting large numbers of suckers are thrown out, and we believe for the same purpose that shoots are on young trees-to keep up a proper circulation and balance in its power.

As to the best time for pruning apple trees we have no doubt. From personal experiments made for several years, from reliable books, conversations with practical men, and a pretty extensive examination of orchards,we are fully of the opinion, that the autumn, after the leaves have fallen, is the proper time. Where we have carefully pruned at this sea-son, it has never been followed by a flowing of the sap and that discoloration of the bark which follows spring pruning. The wounds either heal over or become so dry and hard as to prevent decay, and the tree seems to sustain no check or injury whatever. The head of the tree should be kept open to the air and light, and free from limbs crossing and rubbing each other. Cut out these and the occasional dead limbs which may be found, and the orchard which has been well managed, will need little more in the way of pruning.

HERMETICALLY SEALED PROVISIONS .- The business of putting up provisions in liermetically sealed caps, has become quite an im-portant one in our city. There are five large establishments engaged in it. Beef, mutton, lamb, 'lubster, clams, neats and sheep's tongnes, green peas, green beans, in their season, &c., &c., are put up in immense quantities. But a small portion of the articles put up are used in the city-much the greater quantity being sent to New York and Boston, where they are sold to vessels bound to California, and other long voyages, and likewise for home consumption. When taken from the cans, they are generally in excellent order, and retain much of their original flavor. although months and even years may have elapsed since they were scaled up.-Portland (Me) Adveitiser.

POTASH AS MANURE. Ashes, or potash renders most of the humus soluble in water consequently it produces a very marked and and powerful effect, rendering vegetation for a while extremely inxuriant, but the evils that follow the too free use of this substance are very great, for the soil in a few years is deprived of vegetable matter, and is rendered barren. Hence, it is absolutely necessary, if you make free use of ashes in the amendment of soils, that a constant supply of vegetable matter should be introduced into them, to furnish a sure supply of nutriment to the

If the reader will follow us through his definition of a snob, and then look around upon the community, he will begin to suspect that the class is ' large and respectable.' Said Thackeray :

A such is that man or woman who are always pretending, before the world, to be something better—expecially richer or more fashionable—than they are. It is one who thinks his own position in life contemptible. and is always yearning and striving to force himself above, without the education or characteristics which belongs to it; one who looks down upou, despises, and over-rides his inferiors, or even equals, of his own standing, and is ever ready to worship, fawn upon, and flatter a rich or titled man, not because he is a good man, a wise man, or a Christian man; but because he has the luck to be rich or consequential.'
