

The Farm and the Fire

Plowing in Green Crops.

I am becoming every day more satisfied that the science of farming must look upwards, that the air we breathe is the great fountain that sustains animal as well as vegetable life; and that the great primitive source of all the richness of our soil is from the air. Nothing is destroyed. No sooner does the animal and vegetable die, than it commences its round of change until it returns to its original elements, and is prepared to be re-molded into new animals and vegetables. Let man do his worst, and he cannot destroy one jot or tittle of substance. My neighbor an intelligent man, has collected all the barnyard manure he could buy, and has mingled it with caustic lime, and has made an immense heap which is now a perfect crater almost on fire. Think you if he could see the wheat, corn and grass that is continually ascending from the heap, he would continue the fire? Far from it. He can smell at a great distance, the ammonia and enriching gases, arising of course. Now, if as I have said, we could see the enriching gases arise, and knew their value, the world would be convinced long ago; for "see is to believe."

Well, I hear you say, what a destruction! Not so; not a particle is destroyed; it floats over your farm, and your farm, ready to be brought down to earth by the wind, and who has his clover and other ammonia-bearing plants in his broad fields ready to catch and devour it. I hold that the air above, is and has been for all time charged with the organic properties of plants and that it is a fountain that will never fail, ever ready to respond to the demands of science. Yes, we must of course cultivate the soil. I believe in Tull's theory. If I had the means of retaining the ammonia and invisible nourishment for plants that is foolishly expended on my neighbor's farm, I am satisfied I should have the lion's share.—C. W.—Genesee Farmer.

Wash from the Highway.

Mr. Editor.—The amount of rich fertilizing matter which is annually deposited in the highways, is immense. It could be economically applied to lands in grass and tillage, and with as direct reference to the increase of their productive powers, as the manure from the stables, it would no doubt add millions to the income of the farming classes, and effect, besides, a very important and appreciable amelioration of the soil. In very many cases, the economization of this matter is perfectly practicable, an experience has demonstrated the fact that labor, expended in detecting the wash from the highways, over fields and pastures, is not expended in vain. But in cases where this cannot be done, it is common to gather masses of decaying and absorbent substances, and allow the wash to flow over and soak into them. Muck, weeds, chip manure, old straw, and, in fact, all such like substances, if deposited in hollows by the wayside, where the wash settles, will speedily become impregnated with the fertilizing salts, and thus be rendered a most valuable assistant in the work of fertilization and improvement. But where fields are so situated as to admit of the water flowing over them, the conducting it by sluices over the surface, is perhaps the better method, as soils of a clayey texture, which require sand to render them productive, may receive the wash from arenaceous lands, and thus, in time, be ameliorated by the gradual addition of the very constituent (silica), which is necessary, and in fact physically indispensable to ensure their fertility. A few hours' work will often be sufficient to open the requisite channels for the passage of all the wash from all exposed lines of road, and by filling up the old channels, and opening new ones occasionally, the entire field side will be enriched, and its condition improved more permanently than by the direct application of the richest manure.—Germania Telegraph.

Rural Axioms.

It is as cheap to raise one ton of grass or clover, as a ton of burdock or pig-weed. It costs no more to raise a hundred bushels of cider apples, or ten barrels of Virginia or Bartlett's, than the same quantity of chok-pines. An axe costing two dollars, with which a laborer may cut fifty cords a month, is a cheaper tool than an axe costing but one dollar, with which he can cut only forty cords. A "cheap plough" at five dollars, costing in one season three dollars in repairs and a further amount in fuel, is a dearer plough than one at ten dollars requiring no repairs. A cow bought for ten dollars, whose milk just pays her keeping, affords less profit than one at thirty dollars giving double the value of milk afforded by the former. A common dasher churn at two dollars, used one hundred times a year, is not so economical a purchase as a Kendall churn, at four dollars, requiring but half the labor to work it. A ten acre field, costing fifty dollars per acre, and ditched, manured, and improved at fifty dollars more, so as to give double crops, is much more profitable than twenty acres unimproved, costing the same money. The laborer who wastes half his strength in working all day with a dull saw because he cannot give a shilling or afford an hour to get it sharpened will waste at least twenty-five cents per day, or six or seven dollars per month.

A Sharp Justice.

In one of the remotest recesses of the Mountain District of Tennessee, there resides a community in which there lives but one solitary whig. All the rest belong to the untried Democracy, believing still that Gen. Jackson is President of the United States, and voting for him once in forty years. Well, this Whig has for the last twenty years, it is said, held the office of Justice of the Peace, in this community, by a sort of common consent. But this year political excitement being quite stirring, a project was formed of turning the Squire out of office, and putting in a Democrat.

Mrs. Smith's Philosophy.

Dear me how expensive it is to be poor.—Every time I go to my best bed and tuckler I go to sleep. If Mr. Smith with my head cool, I might wear a coal hod on my head if I chose, with perfect impunity. There was that old nabob's wife at the lecture the other night, in a dress that might have been made for old Noah's great grandmother. She can afford it. Now, if it rains knives and forks, I must sport a ten dollar hat, a forty dollar dress, and a hundred dollar shawl. If I go to a concert I must take the highest priced seat, and ride there and back just to see Tom, Dick and Harry see that I can afford it. Then we must hire the most expensive pew in the best aisle of a top notch church. Then I go to the school not to admit strangers into it who know no English. My little children, Napoleon Bonaparte and Donna Maria Smith can't go to a public school, because, you know, we should not have to pay anything.
